his studio; and he has need to be industrious, for almost every American visitor to Rome must have a portrait or a fancy picture by Read. He is all the fashion new; his commissions since the month of December amount to ever $20,000. The "Star of Bethlehem," once of his most beautiful pictures, was bought off the casel before finished, last December, by Mr. Young, of Castle Kelly, Scotland, a conneisseur of much reputation; and last week a visitor took the "Abou ben Adhem" in the same way. This last is going to be a fine rival of the Star of Bethlehem.

FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE, of how popular that striking picture is, Mrs. Ben Holladay, of California, has commissioned Read to paint her a copy of it, 4 feet 6 lnches by 3 feet 2 inches, which she is to present to General Grant. One of the copies, strange to say, goes "south of Mason and Dixon's line," to a Mr. Avery, Louisvile, Kentucky.

The gamenes are the days of the "Switch-back and the Lehigh Coal and When the great tunnel the Lehigh Coal and When the gre pleased the young prince greatly—it is a little school-boy, dressed in coat, pantaloons, boots, collar, neck-tic, all complete—a real little man picture or statue without fear of incommoding in marble—and was just to the taste of the Engin marble—and was just to the taste of the English heir apparent; it tickled his fancy.

"But," said Wales, turning to the sculptor with quite a quirk of bright wit for him, "as it is Young America you should have made him whittling a stick instead of mending—a pen."

The Prince is not remarkable for making brilliant speeches, but this was such a grand display of fireworks in the way of royal wit, that it was highly applauded, echoed and reechoed, not only throughout the littly bevy of attendants, but the whole John Bull circle in Rome. For many weeks after hundreds of English visitors came to Mozier's istudios, beginning their speech of entrance like Paul Pry, with:

Ist in front of Raphael's Entombment for an hour yesterday; then went from it, almost with our any apparent motive power, there without any apparent motive power, there we then the ginning their speech of entrance like Paul gallery to own the Apollo and Marsyas, I should be sorry for Rome and for such resident students as myself. It would be one of my greatest losses, for there are few pictures from which I gain so much as the Entombment and the Apollo and Marsyas. I should like to be rich statue 'is Royal 'ighness made a remark apon?"

Even to this day every English visitor to the studies asks the workmen this question, and the Italian marble-cutters have coined a compared to the Italian marble-cutters have coined a compared to the Italian marble to the little force which and labor would have the studies are title to the little force which and labor would have the studies are been erected by which, through the agency of a steam engine, the atmospheric air is compressed into an iron retort, whence it-is conveyed, through great India-rubber hose, into the interior of the tunnel and made to do duty in drilling holes in the rock. A half-dozen or more ingeniously contrived drills are set to work, which is run in upon a railroad to the scene of operations. The hose is attached, the drills are set to work, and in a few minutes have like to the little force which land labor would have

In the room with these was a cast of one of Launt Thompson's works, with the pointing marks on it. Launt Thompson left it in Rome last year to be put into marble. It is a charming thought—a portrait-statue of a child. The figure is lying down, and the little hands hold a shell to the ear. The face shows that the child is hearing

Miss Cushman met with an accident on Monday, which might have proved fatal, but luckily did not. As she was being driven down luckily did not. As she was being driven down the way; a screen is put up; the battery is discharged, and the vast heaps of rocks are broken down. These are concleared a day to do. When I left Mozier's I went into Buchanan Read's studio and found him, as usual, hard at work. From day-dawn until nightfall this indefatigable artist labors; he is hardly ever away from his studio; and he has need to be industrious, for almost every American visitor to Rome must have a portrait or a fancy picture by Read. He is all the fashion new; his com-

way. This last is going to be a fine rival of the Star of Bethlehem. One of Mr. Read's clever portraits is of a Miss Johnes, of your city; and the one of Mrs. Alfred Heard, of Boston, is strikingly life-like and beautiful. This last named portrait is treated like the one of the Queen of Naples; there is not a jewel upon it, but it looks like one rare and costly pearl. Read has had portraits ordered of him this winter which go to England, Scotland and all parts of the United States. The many-duplicates of the various sizes of the "Sheridan's Ride" which have been ordered are an evidence.
