The Gordon Homicide.

Over AND TERMINER—Judges Allison and Paxson—In the case of Susan Green, charged with causing the death of Ann Gordon, the jury yesterday afternoon returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, with a recommenda-tion to mercy. Sentence was postponed. The Tilman Homicide.

The case of William Atkinson, colored, charged with the murder of John Tilman, was taken up yesterday afternoon. After ten jurors had been obtained, the panel became ex hausted, and a special venire issued for tales men. This morning the special venire was exhausted after obtaining an additional juror, and a second special venire issued.

A BIGHTEOUS VENDETTA.

How Austrians are Punished for Flogg. It is well known that during the revolutionary wars in Northern Italy, in 1848 and 1849, the Austrian commanders caused a number of aristocratic ladies who had participated in some patrictic demonstration, to be brutally whil ped by Croatic soldiers in front of the city jails, and in the presence of large crowds of spectators. Thus in Brescia the Countess of Ferrari, a young married lady of twenty-five, who had collected money for the revolutionary volunteers, was placed before a Military Commission of Austrian officers, and, by direction of Lieutenant Field Marshal Neipperg, sentenced to receive fifty strokes with the verges. On the same afternoon she was led on the Place d'Armes, and, after having been stripped same afternoon she was led on the Place d'Armes, and, after having been stripped almost naked, tied to a bench, she received he punishment at the hands of two stalwar Croats, who were armed with formidable bunches of birch rods. Every stroke with them must have been intensely painful, but the Countess did not utter a sound of complaint At the twenty-fifth stroke, however, she lainted; and when her executioners had in flicted the full number of strokes on her sense. flicted the full number of strokes on her sense is so body, she was carried back in an almost lifeless condition to her cell, and thrown on a lifeless condition to her cell, and thrown on a lundle of straw. She never fully recovered from this terrible castigation, and died a-few months afterward. This is only one case of many. The fathers, husbands, brothers, and sons of these martyred Italian ladies formed in the year 1850 a secret league for the purpose of meting out punishment to the brutal Austrian commanders who had ordered their mothers, wives, and sisters to be chastised in this cruel manner. They resolved to bide their this cruel manner. They resolved to bide their time, and to pick off the Austrians whenever an opportunity to do so presented itself. Two years ago great excitement was created in Austria by the assassination of an Austrian General, in Illyria, by a young Italian nobleman, who thus avenged his mother, that had been terribly flogged, by order of the General. The avenger succeeded to making his escape, and the Austrian Government did not take pains to obtain his extradition from the Italian authorities. The other day a similar tragedy took place in the Attradition from the Italian authorities. The other day a similar tragedy took place in the neighborhood of Laybach, where Neippergothe principal actor in the cruel scene which we narrated above, owned a country-seat. On the 27th of April, a well-dressed young stranger presented himself at the chateau and told the servant who opened the door to him that he desired to see Count Neippergothe Count is in the garden. Shall I call him?" asked the servant. "No," replied the young stranger, "take me to the garden, and I will see His Excellency there." The servant conducted him to the garden, in rather a remote part of which they met Neipperg, who was promenading with his daughter, a young lady of twenty-two. The stranger, addressing Neipperg, said to him: "I am Count Ferrari! What did you do to my mother?" Neipperg looked in surprise at him. The next moment Count Ferrari plunged a knife inte his breast, and, despite the frantic attempts of the young Countess Neipperg, succeeded in making his escane.

he young Countess Neipperg, succeeded in THE EARL OF DERBY.

His Probable Marriage. A Southern letter to the Chicago Journal says:

"While upon the subject of the aristocracy,
I may mention that a recent rumor has received confirmation, and it is now confidently announced that the new Earl of Derby is about to lay down his bachelorhood, whereat society is greatly surprised, as he was known to entertain a decided as he was known to entertain a decided aversion to the married state. It is rather a curious match, and there is a little history about it worth the telling. Lord Stanley (that was) had remained so long a bachelor that his younger brother, married and with several children, looked upon the natural succession of one of them to the Earldom as certain, and it is said that Lord Stanley had assured him that he never would marry. Since the late Earl's death the younger brother has been very uneasy in his mind, knowing that the new Earl was a great "catch," and fearing that, in some unguarded moment, he might be led to forget his promise, marry, and have sons that, in some unguarded moment, he might be led to forget his promise, marry, and have sons of his own to succeed him. So, to set his mind at rest, Lord Derby resolved to marry, but selected a lady older than himself, and so far advanced in life that all fears of a lineal successor to his title and estates must be utterly groundless. The Earl of Derby is now 44, and his intended wife, the Dowager Marchioness of Salisbury, is past 46. Her first husband died a year or two ago. She married him when she was 23, and he a widower of 56, with grown-up children. The fun of the affair is that Lord Derby, by this marriage, will become step-father to the present Marquis of Salisbury (the pugnacious statesman, hetter known as Lord Robert Cecil, or Viscount Cranborne), who is only four years his junior; i. e., Lord Derby marries his step-mother. It is understood that the comic papers already have cartoons in preparation representing the Earl in various parental attitudes toward his big-whistered boy, and addressing him in all sorts of nursery entitless. boy, and addressing him in all sorts of nursery epithets. Altogether, it is a curious affair. It is also whispered that really the match is but the consummation of an old attachment, and, under all the circumstances, I am inclined to believe that such is the case.

PHILADELPHIA POLITICS.

Some Interesting Items.

The Philadelphia correspondent of the Germantown Telegraph writes as follows:

From a careful examination of the ground I am satisfied that both Myers-and O'Neill will be reported. be renominated for Congress in this city. Kelley's district is in doubt. It is said that General Wm. B. Thomas, late Collector of the port, will accept an independent nomination in this district if tendered him, and that the Democrats in that case will make no nomination for far as I can leave there is no critical. tion. So far as I can learn there is no evidence of any reform movement in regard to Republican Legislative nominations. The issues at lican Legislative nominations. The issues at stake are so great that no party man seems inclined to break ranks at this time. The whole State will have to be districted next winter both for Congress and Legislature, and the loss of either house would be most unfortunate. New men will be chosen in many districts, but that is about all. The Republicans will gain at least one member of the Legislature in this city. Nearly all the colored voters will be added to the Republicans, and there will be some loss on the other hand from dissatisfied white Republicans. But the fact is already manifest that we shall be deluged with another irruption of New York repeaters. The symptoms indicating this are only visible to old stagers, but they are unmistakable. Your correspondent is not an alarmist. He is only a news gatherer. The misfortune of our position is that the Demograte here the works. news gatherer. The misfortune of our posi-tion is that the Democrats have the Mayor and police, the Sheriff and his deputies, and and police, the Sheriff and his deputies, and the District Attorney, and can thus cover up their operations by legal means. Colonel Snowden is also still Prothonotary of the Supreme Court, and the naturalization nuisance may be inflicted upon us again, and the Judges may again be stupid enough to leave either Sharswood or Thompson on duty here, as before, to defend the Prothonotary.

MUSICAL.

—We are informed that Mr. Carl Gaertner, at the request of many of our best musicians, has determined to repeat his last soirée given at Dutton's Rooms, April 30th, 1870, on Thursday evening, June 2d, at Musical Fund Hall, when will be given the Septetto, by Beethoven, and the Nonotto, by Spohr, and various other compositions to be performed by his pupils.

On perceiving the Mar-hal the prisoners ran round the corner and shal the prisoners ran round the corner and disappeared. A boy informed the Marshal that they had entered Mr. Webster's barn, on Park street. The Marshal got a guard of regulars, surrounded and entered the barn, and found Fitzpatrick and McNeil (or Mosby) concealed in the hay. They surrendered without resistance, and were brought to the guard-house under cover of the soldiers' rifies.

Great excitement prevails among the Fenians here, as McNeil and Fitzpatrick were undoubtedly the ablest officers connected with the Fenian movement; and the fact that they were arrested by mere chance tends to show were arrested by mere chance tends to show that they meant business. They are well treated by the United States officers, who re-

All the prisoners denounce Gleason, and refuse to walk prisoners denounce Gleason, and refuse to walk beside him under guard. Dennelly, Lindsey and Cullen complained bitterly of their treatment by Marshals Hazen and Ferrin, saying that but for the kindness of the United States army officers they would have been starved to death, the Murshals net having sent them any food for two days and two nights. Their place of confinement was in the bowling alley of the rink, where the drunken soldiers here were also confined, and the stench of the place was frightful Cullen, wounded in the late war, suffered terribly, one of his wounds having opened. This was intended by the Canadian authorities as a commencement. border. This was intended by the Canadian authorities as a commentary on the Fenian flasco. The question was bandled about by the British officers and soldiers, "Where are the Fenians?" The Prince left for this city by special train immediately after the review. The Fenians are still along the border, and the Canadian volunteers are keeping a sharp lookout for them." Everything is quiet, however, and there are no anticinations of immediate the state of the ever, and there are no anticipations of immediate trouble; still, the Canadians are not entirely over their scare, nor would they be much surprised if there was another attempt made soon to retrieve the wretched fizzle in which the Feuian raid has culminated.

Excitement.

The citizens of Trenton, N. J., are just now wild with excitement over the rumored apparition of a female recently arrived from the world of spirits. On last Saturday night, about eight o'clock, as an honest, industrious and reliable teamster named Flynn, was on his way homewards, in passing through an open lot near his home, the ghastly figure of a female, surrounded with a halo of unearthly light, presented itself to his astonished gaze. The figure was below the medium size, dressed in white, with long and beautiful hair falling carelessly over the shoulders, and with an expression of sorrow depicted on the countenance that was painful to witness. Mute with astonishment and awe this weak mortal stood transfixed, his trembling limbs scarcely able to support the weight of fear and terror that rested upon them. After a few moments of terror and suspense the mysterious form turned towards the astonished teamster, and, gazing steadily into his half-petrified countenance, recounted a tale of deleful cruelty, of which the following is a summary:

About two years and seven months ago she was basely led astray by a wicked young man (still living), who threw her into the feeder that supplies the canal, where she was drowned. He then dragged her body out of the water and buried it in the open lot, where she now stood. Her spirit has been permitted to return from the land of shades for the year. to return from the land of shades for the purpose of making the necessary revelations which will lead to the conviction and execuwhich will lead to the conviction and execu-tion of her murderer, whose name she was yet unwilling to reyeal. Having made the above brief statements of her wrongs she vanished into thin air, telling the terrified Hibernian that he should see her again, and to have no fears, as she intended to do him no bodily

On these facts being announced the entire neighborhood was immediately aroused, the news of the mysterious apparition having spread like wildfire. On Sunday night about 200 persons assembled around the place, but, after waiting in vain for the expected ghost until near midnight, they returned to their homes somewhat disappointed. However, Flynn is positive that what he saw was no humbug, and the greatest faith is placed on his veracity. He is a married man, of a quiet, harnless disposition, not given to jokes, and his story is generally credited. He has not yet told the female's name, and his manner is very reticent. On these facts being announced the entire Columbus to be Made a Saint. The following from the Paris Monde refers o a matter mentioned a week or two ago in our telegraphic despatches:

Ar Italian journal, the Stendardo Cattolico,

Ar Italian journal, the Stendardo Cattolico, at Genoa, states that fresh steps are being taken at Rome to get the eanonization of Christopher Columbus agreed to. It may be remembered so far back, as 1865, two laymen in France and Italy simultaneously, though not in concert, addressed the same demand to the Holy See. In the following year the Cardinal Archbishop of Bordeaux, Mgr. Donnet, in Antilles, prayed the Pope to lend a favorable car to the above petitions. Spain, in its turn, took the matter up, and the Cardinal Archbishop of Burgos fully joined in the prayer of his French colleague. It has been objected that this subject could not be introduced without yiolating the rules wisely laid objected that this subject could not be introduced without violating the rules wisely laid down by Pope Benedict XIV. But this exception—which would be necessarily unique in the history of the Church, since there are no more new worlds to discover and subject to the Gospel—seems justified by the noble character of the man for whom the honor of being placed upon Catholic altars is solicited. It is certain, too, that Christopher Columbus possessed, in an eminent degree, all the Christian virtues. Bottero, who was Secretary to St. Carlo Borromeo, gathered, during his two visits to Spain, some very important evidence as to his temperance, modesty, love of prayer, and his horror of all that is dishonorable in the sight of God.

A Poer Wretch Driven to Suicide
The Poll Moll Gazette says:
Paul Harro-Harring, a Danish political exile, committed suicide at Jersey, on Sunday morning, by poisoning himself with phosphorus taken off the ends of lucifer matches. He had also stabbed himself in the left breast with astiletto. He had been a great political agitator, and had been banished from France and Russia for being mixed up in revolutionagitator, and had been banished from France and Russia for being mixed up in revolutionary movements. He had for years past labored under the hallucination that he was the special object of the hatred of the Russian Government, who had police agents and spies continually about him. He gave constant trouble to the police by his complaints on this score, seeking for protection from his imaginary foes. He was a friend of Lord Byron, and fought with him in the war of Greek independence. On reading Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's book he became greatly excited, and his malady was considerably increased. He was in the receipt of a small allowance made by private friends, among whom was Mazzini, from whom he received 11 per month. He was seventy-one years of age.

MURDER FOR FUN.

A Simple Colored Boy Peisoned in Sport. The Salisbury (Md.)-Eastern Shareman of Saturday says:—A colored youth, known as Jack Crow, was found dead at the Wicomico House Crow, was found dead at the Wicomico House a few mornings since under circumstances that give rise to conjectures of foul play. The said colored individual had recently come from the country and was taken in and cared for by Mr. Brohawn, of the Wicomico. Jack's mental capacity was very much inferior to that of ordinary humanity, and for this reason he was made the object of sport by the boys and young men of the town. Among other eccentricities he possessed an Among other eccentricities he possessed an insatiate appetite, and would swallow almost anything given him. The day previous to his demise some young men, and we say it to their shame, were seen endeavoring to appease his langing for food by giving him wills fly. their sname, were seen enteavoring to appease his longing for food by giving him pills, fly-poison and other nauseous compounds, from which cause it is supposed death resulted. This is the rumor, but we cannot vouch for its correctness, as no post mortem examination of the body has yet been held.

THE FINE ARTS.

Philadelphia Art. Howard Roberts's head of a young girl, in Italian marble, is now finished and placed in Bailey's window, at Twelfth and Chestnut streets. It has great individuality of character, and is named from that poem of Tennyson's called Eleanore, and begining, "Thy dark eyes opened not," etc. The face is noble and young, with evidences of a repressed consciousness that, with less purity, would become coquetry. 'The languors of her love-deep eyes" are retained under the half-closed lids. The lips are full and slightly pressed together, with a kind of serious smile. The sentiment is perhaps best expressed in Tennyson's couplet:

"In thee all passion becomes passionless, Touched by thy spirit's mellowness." The treatment is original and spirited; a broad antique collar of lace stands around the bust; the hair is massively arranged in the old French style. Among the locks is placed a half-blown rose, whose marble petals will never wither nor expand, and a long drooping ourl falls parallel with the stately column of the neck, and brushes the shoulder. The peculiar merit seems to be that, the artist had a previous clear, vivid and glowing comception of character, and has petrified it. Daniel R. Knight exhibits at the same establishment a subject taken from Motley's "Rise of the Dutch Republic." The painting represents one of the wandering Protestant preachers of Holland, who under the tyranny of Philip II. disseminated the pure religion at the risk of their lives, and who traversed the country as colporteurs and exhorters Although the figure is scarcely at half-length, it represents to the mind a whole scene. With a tangled and neglected beard, a forehead furrowed and bald with much thinking, the ardent preacher lifts his eyes to heaven as he expounds from the old clasped bible that has been secreted under his robe. A female face, indistinctly seen behind him, indicates the missionary's success among that sex who have been the conservators of faith from age to age. This subject we consider to be the best of Mr. Knight's representations of a life-size head. The Paris Salen of 1870.

We receive the catalogue of the Paris Salon. for 1870. The works of art exhibited amount to 5,434-a number which makes any pretence at examination of the display simply absurd. We imagine that this singular pressure will some day have to be relieved by a recourse to some day have to be repleved by a recourse to two exhibitions per annum.

Mr. Robert Wylie, ex-officer of the Pennsylvania Academy, exhibits this year a picture still larger than the fine subject (Lecture de la lettre du Flancé) which the jury hung so conspicuously last season. It is another Breton subject, and has a title in the Celto-Breton language, En Baz-Wallen, the marriage-broker in Brittany. A beautiful pencil drawing, by Mr. Wylie, representing the Remembrandtesque effect of this picture, has been sent to one of his Philadelphia the Remembrandtesque effect of this picture, has been sent to one of his Philadelphia friends, and lies before us; his accompanying letter says: "I have finished and forwarded to the Paris Salon the most important of all my pictures, in size at least, the stretcher measuring one mètre (yard) and 75 centimètres long. It represents the marriage-commissioner in It represents the marriage-commissioner in Brittany. If all is well"—continues Mr. Wylie,—"I shall endeavor to send it to the Wylie,—"I snail endeavor to send it to the Academy's Exhibition of next year, and may be another, as I do not intend to let a year pass while abroad without having something to keep me from being totally forgotten in the old (horker City)" to keep me from being totally forgotten in the old Quaker City."

A few other pictures, from the immense mass recorded in this catalogue, may be selected as interesting to American readers:

Frederick A. Bridgman, a young New York artist, a pipul of Gerôme, whose Salon picture of last year was engraved for the Monde Illustré, exhibits two paintings: one represents a "Country Circus," and the other "What the Young Girls Talk about"—the last title being what designates one of Alfred de Musset's dramatic trifles.

Edward H. May contributes two canvases: one, from a subject in Cymbeline, represents "Arvigarus carrying the body of Imogen;" the other, "Portrait of Baby Carr," belongs to Mr. Fell.

Constant Mayer resident of New York

Mr. Fell.

Constant Mayer, resident of New York, who returned thither last week, and has opened a studio at No. 1155 Broadway, contributes "Maud Muller. (John Whittier, Ballade americaine)." Mr. Mayer, says the French catalogue, was born at Besangon; and was a pupil of Leon Cogniet.

Henry Bacon, of Boston and Philadelphia, contributes "How to Pay the Bill" and "The Friends." His friend, Howard Helmich, does not send anything.

Friends." His friend, Howard Helmich, does not send anything.

These are the most noteworthy American displays. Before parting from them, we wish to quote a passage from the correspondence of Mr. Wylie, above-named. It reflects most vividly the lofty standard of art and the desperate competition of artists in Europe, as seen by a representative American craftsman. Speaking of his art and experience, Mr. Wylie says: "The whole may be summed up in this one simple phrase, continual study. When leaving Philadelphia, I had a vague notion that the very breathing of the artistic air of Europe would in time make me an-artist—it is a very general notion, I assure you. But I Europe would in time make me an artist—it is a very general notion, I assure you. But I was undeceived very soon, when I found myself shoulder to shoulder with art-students of my own age, I renchmen struggling for the Prix de Romz, night and day—men of a higher order of talent than any one I had yet encountered. Their ideas were different from mine. They told me their experience—born in Paris, one of them the son of a painter of reputation in Europe, Leloir—that I must make up my mind to it from the first, that Art was like a man rowing a boat against a current; as long as he kept a.

a boat against a current; as long as he kept a firm steady our he made progress; but the moment he slacked his pull to look about him moment he slacked his pull to look about him and rest on his oars, that moment he commenced to make lee-way." Thus in simple strong language does a hard student protest against the fallacy that any "divine right" in art will excuse the professional man from the most intense application.

The foreign pictures, so vast in number, offer this year comparatively few landmarks of interest. Great crowds stop before Yvon's allegorical subject, painted for A. T. Stowart, and heretofore noticed in these columns. French criticism is unfavorable to this effort. Zamacois exhibits "The Education of a

The Princess Colonna has been socially celebrated for the dangerous favors of the Emperor. She has always exbibited her numerous artistic efforts under the pseudonym Marcella until this year, when her name and rank appear in the catalogue. name and rank appear in the catalogue.
