Yvon, now to be seen at the annual exhibition of the Fine Arts, and executed by the order of Mr. Stewart, of New York. The subject is the Thirty-four States of the Union, grouped round a symbolical figure of the Republic. The torch of the civil war lies extinguished, and the demons of discreta and evil passions are being hurled down into the bottomless pit by archangels, while industry and prosperity revive with the return of peace. On one side of the painting are represented emigrants from all the countries of Europe flocking to the land of freedom, and on the other the black populations of the East holding up their hands in supplication to the maneipators of their race. The painting is of enormous proportions, fitted only for some great public hall or gallery. It attracts great attention, and is always surrounded by a host of gazers, who see in it at least a tribute painting to American greatness. The Emperor, on his first visit to the Exhibition, paused for some time before the painting, as though trying to realize the colossal fortunes of a people who have so completely put to flight all his hopse for the predominance of the Latin race!

Coast. Total. For. Coast. Total teamships ..... were found upon him. Gen. Donnelly was removed from Franklin to St. Albans, yesterday, under arrest. GEN. STARR yesterday made "an official statement" to a Fenian Convention, at Buffalo, in regard to the fiasco on the border. He says. that on reaching "the front" from Malone, last Friday, he found not over 200 men there. Col.

Leary, with 60 men, was beyond the line. He marched across the line to join Leary, and, on mustering, found he had 108 men. He at once threw up a barricade, and put out a picket of 17 men. Next morning the British advanced in force, the Sixty-ninth Regiment, 4 guns and 700 men, forming the column. Resistance to such a force being useless, he ordered a retreat, which was made under cover of the treat, which was made under cover of the treat of the such as marched across the line to join Leary, and, on I treat, which was made under cover of the picket fire. The British fired several volleys, out so wildly as to do no harm. Colonel Smith, with 100 Buffalo Fenians, came up at this time, but was ordered to fall back with Starr's command. Starr says the retreat was ports as to their demoralization. He reports | s only one man slightly wounded by a spent Forty-First Congress-Second Session.
