MILK —" Bread", says the proverb, is "the staff of life." What relation to life is sustained staff of life." What relation to life is sustained by milk a reporter cannot reasonably be expected to know enough to say. To an opinion upon that point his income would scarcely impart the proper degree of validity. Milkin a city of a million of people is an institution. While bread may be the staff of life, the notion of our reporter is that milk constitutes its leading strings. In New York we find adult gentlemen, like Mr. Smythe, diluting the delightful fluid with restaurant gin. We don't so find it here:

adult gentlemen, like Mr. Smythe, diluting the delightful fluid with restaurant gin. We don't so find it here:

The milk furnished to the people of Philadelphia is proverbially excellent, if not proverbially rich. The water introduced to it is invariably clean. The dealers would scorn the idea of resorting to chalk. Montgomery county people don't feed their milkers on distillery swill. The caudal appendages of their cows are of full length, with whisks on the end of them indicative not only of full feeding, but of full health. We believe that the milk as delivered in the city from farms around us, is delivered in the precise condition that it was yielded from the cow. We also believe that by the gentlemen who serve it at our doors, it is so often diluted that a white cow would turn red with indignation if shown the article sold to us as her production. A wig is said to be "a lie with hair on it." That the inscription, "Pure Milk," upon the wagons of many of our friends the milkmen, is much in the same category, we find daily assurance in our morning coffee, and in the way the whey forms in our dessert custard. No other legitimate traffic employing so small a capital, is so lucrative as the retail milk business. We have seen a dead donkey. We never yet saw a milkman in financial distress, or with a Sheriff's flag flying from his parlor window. Monopoly can no more hurt the milk trade than it can hurt the business of the baker. Berdan started a big steam bakery in Brooklyn. The bakery burned down. Philadelphia capitalists started one in Vine street. It went up. A company recently undertook to supply Philadelphia burned down. Philadelphia capitalists started one in Vine street. It went up. A company recently undertook to supply Philadelphia with pure milk. They kept their word. The milk was supplied from the fattest pastures of Chester county. Not only this—it was sold at two cents a quart less than was charged for it by others. The trouble was that the milk was too good. Being undiluted it soured: a clap by others. The trouble was that the milk was too good. Being undiluted it soured; a clap of thunder instantly turned a cellar full of it into bonny clabber. People didn't know what to make of it. The drivers came to their relief by reducing the milk with water, and putting the pecuniary equivalent into their own pockets. The enterprise, like the steam ba-pockets. The enterprise, like the steam bakery, went up.

On Saturday we met a gentleman from Chadd's Ford. He has a dairy of sixty cows. His entire revenue is derived from it. He sells his milk in this city for four cents a quart. The drawback for freight is half a cent, leaving him 34 cents ner quart for a quantity that now him 31 cents per quart for a quantity that now amounts to eight hundred quarts per day. With the dairyman the question of profit is divided between milk, cream and butter. Those who sell the milk save all labor but the labor at the pail. Other dairymen sell order. Those who sell the milk save all labor but the labor at the pail. Other dairymen sell only the cream, and introduce the skimmed milk to the attention of their pigs. That the price of butter is annually growing higher is because of the enormous quantities of cream taken for the purposes of the confectioner. Of the unsophisticated article we in the city get very little. The cream is eked out with milk. It is further adulterated with corn starch or arrow root. For the production of cheese this

It is further adulterated with corn stated arrow root. For the production of cheese this vicinity is not noted. The recent starting of a cheese factory in Chester county is the only noteworthy movement yet made in this direction of which we know. Of Philadelphia button of which we know. ter the excellence is so well known that many a hundred former Philadelphians, now resident in New York and Boston, have butter sent to them regularly from this city. Strong metal boxes are made expressly for the purpose, with an oblong in the centre for the reception of ice. We see them at Adams' Extended to the control of the control press office on every Wednesday and Saturday morning that we pass it.

The colder anything is the more tasteless.
Doctor Hall, in the Journal of Health, claims ice cream to be fit only for the stomach of a brewell to be fit only for the stomach of a brawny laborer. The leavings of one batch are often added by confectioners to the fresh preparation of the day following. The stale portion, if melted, would be not only nauseating, but pernicious; the coldness and the taste of the flavoring alone mask its rancidity.

What with the demand for fairs, festivals and confectioners, the outside consumption of milk is annually increasing. This season it has been at a comparative standstill. The partial destruction of the strawberry crop, the protracted existence of wet weather and the increased scarcity of ice this season hav bothered the dairymen. Our Chadd's Ford in formant says that even at 3 cents net for hi formant says that even at 3½ cents net for hi milk he is glad to find a reliable and unfailing market.

As what is true of one is true of all, our milkmen friends might less patronize the hydrants at the depots of the railroads. The gentlemen at Ninth and Green streets, who fill their cans with water, and canter their horses their cans with water, and canter their horses for a square or two to make thorough the admixture, should remember that, in the next world, they will be judged, not by the inscriptions on their wagons, but by the character of the article they sold while sojourning in Philadelphia. Like people in many other branches of hustings, the producer of will of business, the producer of mill realizes the smallest profit. The gentleman who nots the hundred per cent is the middle man. He does it in supplying us with almost every article we consume. The idea that an agricultural community is a mean one is not agricultural community is a mean one is had based upon sound judgment. "He that lives by tilling the land," says the Talmud, "shall dine upon a cabbage and salt. He that lives upon traffic will dine upon meat and wine." The farmer doesn't get up correct on copper stock or quicksilver. If he ners on copper stock or quicksilver. If he shaves an occasional note for an unthrifty neighbor, the transaction isn't often a heavy one. To a man whose revenue grows with the tassels upon his corn, with the serrating of the blades in his pasture field, or the descending jet of the lacteal into his milk pails, the idea that a dollar is made up of a hundred cents is nothing more than natural.

Let our milkmen think of these things, and when next they go to their hydraut do their watering gently. To find butter in a baby's watering gently. stomach after churning it on your knee, fron drinking the kind of milk served to our indi vidual household, is an impossible problem.

LOCAL CHOWDER. Sunday school excursions are the order of the day. Perhaps a dozen of them, deferred in consequence of soaky weather, came off this morning. The most numerous in the lot was one from the Roman Catholic Church of St. Philip. The church is situate in Queen street. The line of march taken by the participants in reaching the cars covered the sidewalk for three

So prolinic are the imported sparrows that their first brood of fledgelings set out on their own account somewhere about the fitteenth daylof July. Having accomplished this much the parent birds exhibit their assiduity by making immediate arrangements for a second crop.

—Young America is anticipating the advent of July the Fourth. It is doing so by the discharge of fire-crackers in the public streets. What the Chinaman lacks in his knowledge of perspective drawing he rather more than makes up in point of efficiency in the manufacture of dinner gongs, fire-crackers and teak-wood trays. Some half-a-dozen youngsters were arrested this morning in the lower the middle of the street.

Oysters just now should be religiously eschewed. By first-class dealers, the trade in them has for some time been suspended. After the middle of May no oyster is eaten by professional oystermen. The flesh of the mollusk, at this season of the year, is always flaccid and unsubstantial. That at this writing it is particularly so is a statement concerning which no oysterman puts in a dissent.

United States District Court, this morning, the United States Court delivered an opinion granting a perpetual injunction against defendant. The question at law was whether a Marshal's sale of a patented article conveyed the right also to use that patent. In this case the property so sold was a machine for making bricks. The buyer has the machine. As things new look he cannot use if.

He not only did this, but also patented it. He charges infringement on the liant of Burton. Burton rushed to a patent lawyer. In his opinion Mr. Fenner is a foo-foo. The defendant allows that the right of the plaintiff to the patent is merely, the result of an unauthorized assigned. The matter comes under the head of "a mixed-up case."

"In to-day's issue of the North American, under the head of "Uncharitable," is an article stating that the Soldier Messenger, J. F. Kelly, who fell in a fit at Ninth and Market, was carried to the drug store at Ninth and Filbert streets, where he was refused admission, inferring thereby that his death resulted from the alleged refusal on the part of the druggist in question. The following is a true statement of the case: He was not refused admission, but was placed under the awning, where the gentleman in charge of my store examined him, and made the proper applications to check the flow of blood, which was profuse. The proposition was agreed to with the understanding that the previous question should be ordered to night, and a vote taken tomorrow. Amid profound and attention, both on the ficor and in the gallery. Mr. Banks proceeded to speak in behalf of the resolutions reported by him from the Committee. One hundred and seven thousand men had been employed by Spain to suppress the Cuban insurrection, of whom about fifty thousand were sent from Spain. The war has been conducted by Spain with a barbarity never before equalled. If we cannot recognize the Cubans we ought at lenst maintain neutrality between the contestants and should express our solemn wish that the tain neutrality between the contestants and should express our solemn wish that the President should renew our protest against Spanish irregularities and cruelties. Spain recognized the rebellion in the United States, and declared neutrality sixty-five days after Fort Sumter was fired on, and before a drop of blood was shed. She could make no objection to our doing the same thing in the case

tion to our doing the same thing in the case of Cuba twenty-one months after war began, and after hundreds have been butchered.

The message of the President says there is no government in Cuba. It is an error. They have a government perfect in its workings and details. Had the Cubans been left to conduct the ground that it in the real and since a state in the same and since and since a state in the same and since a state in the same and since a state in the same and since a state of the same and since a state in the same and since a same duct the war as their instincts and wishes dictated, they never would have butchered a prisoner. They were forced to retaliate to save themselves from extinction. It is our fault, not that of the President, that these inings exist. The American people are responsible: If we continue indifferent to this struggle and its attendant horrors, we deserve as a nation to be damned! Speaking of the Presidut's message, he said, a lawyer who, for anything message, he said, a lawyer who, to anything but pay, would send such a document to the American people, for us to act upon, ought to be forever reprobated.

The message says the insurgents hold no town in Cuba. But they hold the country. Most of the towns are on the coast, where they have no navy to protect themselves. Reports had been busily circulated assigning incremary motives to the friends of Cuba, and tending to implicate them in Cuban bond transactions. He would not dignify these reports with a formal refutation. There was no doubt they emanated from official Spanish sources.

A representative of the Spanish Government in Washington had told a correspondent of a newspaper published in the neighborhood where he (Banks) resided that General Banks had no motive in this Cuban matter, Banks had no motive in this Cuban matter, except that which actuated him in supporting the San Domingo scheme, in the success of which he (Banks) was understood to have a contingent interest. If the American Minister at Madrid should asperse Spanish Legislators in that manner he ought to be drummed out of the city. [Applause.] Such a Minister is unworthy the courtesies and respect of the American people. During the delivery of Mr. Bank's speech he was frequently interrupted by applause, especially in the galleries, which the Speaker promptly suppressed. At its conclusion he was very generally congratulated.

Mr. Orth said that by adopting the minority resolution, submitted by him, the House would declare a permanent foreign policy in all contests arising between colonies on the all contests arising oetween colonies on the American continent and adjacent islands and home governments. He thought Mr. Banks was mistaken in saying he was not in favor of recognizing the belligerency of Cuba. His (Banks) resolution recognized the contest in Cuba, and that amounts to the recognition of belligerency. He (Orth) had read of hourers Cuba, and that amounts to the recognition of belligerency. He (Orth) had read of horrors enacted in Cuba, including the butchery of six hundred prisoners in cold blood by Quesada. He regretted these horrors as much as any one, but he did not forget that both parties to the contest were Spaniards. He thought no substantial good would come to us or the Cubans from recognition. The moment we recognize Cuba we subject every vessel of our merchant marine to search and seizure at the hands of Spania.

hands of Spain.

He was glad the President had courage to send that message to the House. He had planted himself in the position of Monroe and of Jackson, when the latter sent a similar message advising against the recognition of the insurgents in Texas. President Grant addresses us in the interests of peace, and will command the approval of the country and of
