Philadelphia Money Market. Philadelphia Money Market.

Thursday, June 16, 1870.—The money market to-day is as quiet and easy as usual. The demand for money is very moderate both for business and speculative purposes, and no material change is perceptible in the rates current. Money is freely offered at 3a4 percent, on call and at 5a6 percent, on first class mercautile paper.

Mr. Garfield's substitute bill passed the House yesterday, providing for the issue of $90.000,000 additional National Bank currency, and the redemption of the $45.000,000 3 percent, certificates. The effect on the market is yet to be seen, but it will be limited, as there is no chance of its adoption by the Senate.

Gold opened at 113%, advanced to 113%, and closed about noon at 11314.

Government stocks are quiet but very firm, a portion of the last showing a fractional advance. of the list showing a fractional advance.

The bill which is thus kept be fore. Coursess by the national banks is merely; "dumm's to prevent the membors from legislating the repeal of the national bank system. Were the national banks, inactive, the Western members would urge a bill for free banking or for one substituting greenbacks for the national bank notes. The present banks constitute a powerful monopoly, and they intend to maintain their exclusive privileges. By raising a windmill like the present bill they will set all the Quixotes in Congress to lighting it. The vote to-day was only a bare majority, and that majority was secured by striking out the proposition to cancel fifty millions of greenbacks. The real object of the bill is to keep Congress employed on something and to waste time. Mr. Garfield may not know that he is the not of the national banks, but he is such nevertheless, the certainly showed himself very ignorant of financial natters when he declared that his bill, as passed, was no of expansion. The bill, of the contrary, is one of violest contraction: In the first piace it cancels the forty-five millions of greenbacks in the reserve of thanks. The new issue of ninety-five millions of national bank notes are only so many checks. They a not legal-tender, and may be refused in payment debts. But, as they add so much more to this billions of the banks, they force the bank of a draw in nearly twenty-five millions of greenbacks as a corresponding reserve. The effect the bill is therefore a contraction of nearly sever millions of greenbacks, which are the only paper mor of the country. The street took Mr. Garfield's interpretation of the bill as the correct one, and in the belief that ninery five millions national bank noies were to be issued against a withdrawal of only forty five millions of three per cents., the "bulls" ran the price of stocks up a half to one per cent. The comparative table of prices below will exhibit the highest quotations thus attained.

The expectation of the passage of Senator Banks' Chear resolutions started an upward movement in gold; which was encouraged by the firmness in the foreign exchange market and assisted by some covering on the part of the "shorts." The extreme prices were 1134, and 1124. The better feeling was also due to the purchase in one lot at 112.90 of the government gold to day by a firm reputed to be operating heavily on the 'bull' side of the market.
