LOCAL CHOWDER.—The heated air of last night was cooled just before midnight by a suddenly gathering and copiously descending shower of intermingled hall and rain. The shower of intermingled half and rain. The former descended in pellets that, in their way downward from the overhanging clouds, formed themselves into masses. The effect has been a temporary reduction of about six degrees, from that of the day previous, of the temperature of to day. --Messrs. -Ine school Director who the other day showed his inability to distinguish the difference between a ticket for a hograffle and a ticket of admission to the Girls' High School, has again distinguished himself. He was present at a school-meeting. A preamble and resolutions were offered. The preamble contained four samples of the word "whereas". preamble contained four samples of the word "whereas," The word "resolved" was four times repeated. The vote was duly put, and the question was decided in the affirmative. The Chairman officially announced the action of the Board, and called up the next order of business. This brought the new Director to his feet. "Mr. Chair-man," said he, "I don't believe in no shenan-agin whatever." I expect to do business on the square. When them resolutions kem up I went in for 'em. You've ordered them passed. what I want to know is why you took in them four resolveds and then try to shut up our eyes by saying nothin' about the four whereases? The sequel is to be imagined rather than described. That the School Director is unable to read or to write is doubted by none who know him.

THE NEW LABOR MOVEMENT.

Chinese Shoemakers in Massachusetts A correspondent of the Boston Advertiser, writing from North Adams, Mass., where a large number of Chinamen have been em-ployed in a shoe factory, gives the following, speaking of the instruction given to the new hands. He says: I have said that the new pupils look on si-berting the provide of the service of the servi

I have said that the new pupils look of is lently at the work of lasting, pegging, trim-ming done for their instruction. They say very little, but seem all eyes and attention. One of them seems particularly quick in catching the ideas the teacher strives to impart in dumb show. It is our young friend, Ah My "Thot is a smart hoy" whisnes the in-

"That is a smart boy," whispers the in-structor to us behind his hand. But Ah My's quick ears catch the words; and Ah My has hade such rapid progress in English since yesterday, that he can under-stand them...There is an evident sincerity of modestry in the way he shakes his head nodesty in the way he shakes his head. "No smart. Me foolee. You velly smart." They have all caught the names of the tools,

They have all caught the names of the tools, too; and if a call is made for the hammer, or the knife, they repeat the sound very cor-rectly, and dive after the implement with the eagerness of children. These two gangs are learning to last, trim and finish the shoes. In another corner of the room three Chinamen have set themselves the task of mastering the pegging machine. This consummate specimen of Yankee inven-tion needs a good deal of skill in the handling, as all can tell who have seen the devious course in which the curves of the sole are car-ried around the swift-falling punching and ried around the swift-falling punching and driving apparatus. The foot and both hands need to be busy, and the everyon the need to be busy, and the eyes on the alert. But to learn the combined move-ment practice is more efficacious than precept: so these three apprentices, having been shown the rudiments, are workhaving been shown the rudiments, are work-ing away at their task by themselves, taking turns at the machine. The way at which the last will fly out at the wrong moment from under the awl seems enough to discourage anybody; but they are not discouraged, but indicate approbation or disapprobation at each other's varying success with low ex-clamations, and stick to the job after more failures than Robert Bruce's famous spider, with a persistency which pro-mises the spider's ultimate success. They have one grace which the spider is not shown by the record to have possessed, in a modesty by the record to have possessed, in a modesty approaching to shyness, so that while we stand watching close by, or while a friendly bevy of girls from upstalrs are looking on, the unruly, machine swings about more wildly than ever. But withdraw to the other end of the room, and look at them furtively now and then, and we shall see that with every trial they tread the path of improvement towards perfection.

Your correspondent first visited the work Your correspondent first visited the work-shop on Thursday morning, two or three bours after the work of teaching had been begun, and saw the state of affairs he has endeavored to describe—the instructors work-ing slowly and silently, the pupils silently watching every motion. Things looked en-couraging, indeed; but they looked as if a long job had been begun, which the lack of language to communicate the simplest ideas would make tedious and difficult. He went there again on Thursday after-noon, six hours later in the day: He went there again on Thursday after-noon, six hours later in the day; and, behold, the two "teams" were working at their benches, each man doing his appointed part in the completion of the shoe, and a heap of finished shoes testifying to the success of their first essays. It seems tame enough in the telling, but to the actual observation it appeared almost a miracle. Ah My and his friends no longer watch the ieachers; they work away themselves in a business-like fashion, while the teacher watches them, but are ready to accept the slightest pantomimic hint from him as to any maccuracy or awkward method in their work, and sure to correct the error the next tume. The instructor's brows no longer nme. contract with anxiety and doubt-at-the ob stacles to be overcome, but his eyes gleam with pleasure as he points to this or that is strong, and, as I have hinted, he who have grain of fastidiousness in his composition, and who would disribut the thighest theory of who would cherket the shighest theory of Oriental civilization, should read, with the Chinese, study with them, play with them, sip-tea with them, but by all means decline an nyitation to si, down to dinner with them. The Chinese bill of fare at North Adam -will consist mainly of rice, meat and tea-th-two former articles, of course, to be purchased at the local markets; the latter probably to b imported via San Francisco. The colonats brought with them a variety of little delica-cies in the way of cataus and similar prepa-rations made in China, and it is quite likely that their supply of these will be kept up by importations from time to time. Among their trans was a hag of ginger roots and of the traps was a bag of ginger roots, and some of the gardens of North Adams are to try the ex-periment whether the spicy plant can be raised in New England.

THE COURTS.

QUARTER SESSIONS-Judge Ludlow.-The case of George B. Thatcher, charged with em-bezzlement as clerk in the United States Pension office, was not concluded yesterday. The defence alleged that the discrepancy in Mr. Thatcher's account resulted, not from the ab-straction of fands, but from the loose and in straction of funds, but from the loose and ir-regular mode of keeping accounts in the Pen-sion office. It was further alleged, in ex-planation, that Col. Forbes was in the habit of advancing money to pensioners before pay-day, taking, therefor, due bills from the pensitners. To sustain this, the defence called Colone' Forbes himself, who, while ad-mitting the advances, asserted that the funds came from his own pocket, and had no re-lation to the funds in the possession of the de-fendant, who was required to account for that. An effort was made to show that some of these advances were made during January, but the An effort was made to show that some of these advances were made during January, but the Court ruled that this testimony must be con-lined strictly to the 19th, 21st and 22nd of January, the days mentioned in the testified that on the 19th of January he ob-tained from Mr. Thatcher at advances of 855 mechanic a low, sir, is going to make a splendid work-man." Mr. Sampson's naturally exultant at the success, substantially assured thus early, of the venture which a few weeks ago seemed to involve so much risk and required so much to involve so much risk and required so much courage. "That shoe," he says affectionately, bandling one which has been turned out ready for market, "that shoe is as good as any you could pick out of a hundred cases down stairs which the Crispins made." And, indeed, these Celestial mechanics have a nicety of touch and careful method that far surpass the traits of the average French and Juich above traits of the average French and Irish shoe-makers, who control the lodges and dictate the grade of work to be done in the western the grade of work to be done in the western part of the State. It is said that one of them this morning having seen the teacher bend by accident one of the iron pegs at a certain point in the circuit of the soul, himself bent a peg at the same point in making his next shoe. But from what I have seen I am include to think that increased I am inclined to think that many of the stories which come to us of the slavishness of Chinese imitation are the offspring of the ex-uberant humor of the Pacific Coast, and that the conscientious faithfulness in the performance of every detail of an assigned task, which gives rise to these tales, is not inconsistent with a good degree of independent judgment and sagacity on the part of the workman, promising the best results in the quality of his work. The sort of shoes which Mr. Sampson work. The sort of shoes which Mr. Sampson turns out—those for ladies' wear, laced or but-toned high about the ankle, which would be called boots in the retail store by clerks and customers—are particularly adapted for this kind of labor, and I shall be mistaken if the Chinese-made goods do not presently take rank as the most desirable in New England. As we pass out of the bottomers' room, we notice that our three friends are still taking turns at wrestling with the pegger, cheerfui and undaunted as ever, and with great proand and and the a set of and with great pro-gress since the morning trials. It may happen that as we pass out of the factory we find ourselves in the dining-room at the hour of the mid-day meal. And here let it be confessed that the most catholic views of the equality of race, the heartiest admira-tion for a prophy missively the of the equality of race, the heartiest admira-tion for a people universally educated, the warmest liking for strangers so cheerful and affable and easily taught as these young men, all receive a shock at the right of the Chinese colony at dinner. So strong is prejudice in this crucial point of civilization. There is nothing in-tinsically offensive about chop-sticks. The chop-sticks themselves, tied together in a bundle, or displayed singly as curiosities on a what-not, are harmless and rather interesting articles. But behold three or four score Chi-namen grouped on benches about a dozen mannen grouped on benches about a dozen mall tables. Each holds in his left hand, close up to his face, a bowl of rice. In the other Sand, held between the ingers like the bones of negro minstrelsy, are the pair of chop-

A platter of meat sits in the centre of the table, its contents on this occasion being lobster, chopped line, an im-portation from China. Into this the chop-sticks of each are plunged at intervals, to vary the monotony of the rice with a choicer mor-sel. When the bowls are empty—which is in about six or eight minutes from the beginning of the repast—each-Olinaman leaps from his bench and hurries to the kitchen, not to put the crockery away, as I at first imagined, but to bring_it back full of fragrant tea. And here the bitterest prejudice against the Celestial manner of supplying the wants of the inner man must pause to acknowledge the superlative quality of this
