An Important Bill in Congress. OFFICE OF THE BOARD OF TRADE, 505 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, June 29, 1870.— To the Editor of the Evening Bulletin:—The following is printed as telegraphic information in each of the morning papers supplied with news by the New York Associated Press:

"Mr. Finklenburg, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to regulate the appraisement and inspection of imports in certain cases, allowing the transportation of impraisement and inspection of imports in certain cases, allowing the transportation of imported articles in bond, except wine, distilled spirits and perishable and explosive articles from New York, Boston, Baltimore, Port Huron and New Orleans, to any of such ports, or to Portland, Buffalo, Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Evansville and Milwaukee."

The transportation of imported articles in bond has been allowed between these points.

bond has been allowed between those points for the last fifteen years. These Philadelphia out "Commercial" papers leave Philadelphia out entirely. The bill in question includes Phila-delphia, and is one which this Board originated in 1866 (see reports), and allows mer-chandise, imported at any port of entry, to be transported to its port of destination without appraisal or bonding at the port of arrival. Our Representatives, Messrs. O'Neill and Myers, have been indefatigable in urging it forward from the first, and deserve well of the busine public of this city for their efforts. It is a bill of great importance to the Commerce of Philadelphia.

SPANISH BRIGANDAGE.

The Englishmen Captured by Spanish Brigands. The correspondent of the Standard at Gibraltar, from whom the best accounts published in England of the capture of the Messrs.

Bonell have been received, has written a highly interesting narrative of the experiences of the Englishmen while in the hands of their capture. They were taken on it would be the results of the standard of their captures. captors. They were taken, as is well known, on the 21st of May, and at first only $5,000 was on the 21st of May, and at first only $5,000 was asked as a ransom. Shortly after eight o'clock at night the brigands and their captives left the ventorillo where they had spent the afternoon. Before starting the prisoners had been robbed of their watches, and $10 had been borrowed from the nephew. The night became dark, and the bandits were evidently ignorant of the country; a man was encountered whom they compelled to act as a guide, and so dark was it that this guide. a guide, and so dark was it that this gnide was obliged to crawl upon his bands and knees in order to keep on the right path. At knees in order to keep on the right path. At daybreak the party found themselves in the neighborhood of Castellar, and here they halted, lying concealed in a thick part of the wood. Here the captives got some food. Most of the party lay down to rest. One, however, was constantly on guard, and at no time was either of the captives allowed to move a couple of yards away. Inring the move a couple of yards away. During the halt Don Antonio (the brigand chief) said to Mr. Bonell, "Don Juan, when we took you at the ventorillo near Gibraltar we merely asked you for 5,000 dollars, but now we have asked you for 5,000 dollars, but now we have carefully considered the subject and we must have 30,000 dollars." Mr. Bonell replied that such an amount was quite out of their power to give, and that the best thing would be to kill them at once. Both he and his nephew were prepared to die courageously; they only supplicated that the manner of their death might be one attended with the least possible suffering. This style of answer seems to have met the approbation of all the brigands, for met the approbation of all the brigands, for from that moment they were treated with more respect, and less harshly addressed.

The brigands at length ascertained that they would get 27,000 dollars, and determined on the release of their prisoners.

Mr. Bonell, sen., was blindfolded, mounted on horseback, and, accompanied by two robbers, removed from his nephew. He rode for some six hours, but he is confident that he was taken backwards and forwards and round the house, for the handkerchief being somewhat loosely tied he was enabled to recognize stones and marks on the road. When they halted the bandage was taken from his eyes, and he found himself at the entrance to Xeres. They entered a fonda for refreshment, the captain of the band warning his captive to appear as entered a fonda for refreshment, the captain of the band warning his captive to appear as much as possible like an ordinary traveler and that on his discreet conduct depended not only his own-life-but that of his nephew. From Xeres Mr. John Bonell went to Cadiz, and the story of his arrival here and his departure with the ransom money has already been told. The manner in which the ransom was handed over to the robbers has also anneared in right The manner in which the ransom was handed over to the robbers has also appeared in print. A few words about the movements of the nephew will now complete the history of this remarkable affair. On Monday evening one of the robbers arrived and told the nephew that the ransom had been paid, and that very shortly he would be set at liberty. About an hour after the three other men came. About an hour after the three other men came and, placing all the money on the table, Mr. and, placing all the money on the table, Mr. Bonell, Jr., was ordered to count it, and divide it into five equal portions, placing $2,000 aside for special expenses. While doing this Don Antonio jocosely remarked, "That really such a large sum of money made a very small show on the table." About midnight Mr. Bonell was blindfolded and placed on horseback with one of the brigands; they rose for about two one of the brigands; they rode for about two hours, when they dismounted, and Mr. Bonell's eyes were uncovered. He was told to nell's eyes were uncovered. He was told to remain where he was till daybreak, and that then he was to proceed a short distance in front, where he would discover a railway station. He was to take a ticket for Port St. Mary's, and on arrival there he would either find his friends waiting for him at the station or at the Fonda de los Toros. Soon after the brigand had left a Sereno. or night watchmap, challenged him Toros. Soon after the brigand had left a Sereno, or night watchman, challenged him. It appears most probable that this man was one of the gang, and that the real Sereno had been bribed to "pass by on the other side," for having plied Mr. Bonell with numerous questions, the finally asked him if he had heard that two gentlemen from Gibraltar had been taken away! by brigands. THE GREAT FIRE ON LONG ISLAND

Ten Thousand Acres of Wood Land Burned ---$100,000 Loss.

A[Large Quantity of Cordwood Destroyed ... Five Hundred Men Fighting the Flames -- A Providential Shower -- The Beautiful Rain" as an Extinguisher... Detail of the Losses.

The largest fire which has ever occurred in the woods of Long Island commenced a few minutes after 12 o'clock on Saturday noon, on the line of the Long Island Railroad, about one and a half mile east of Deer Park Station. The fire originated from a spark from the locomotive attached to the freight train going east, and in the immediate vicinity of where the foreman of the Deer Park section was at work with eight men. Notwithstanding the fire originated as it did, these men, it is said, neither lifted a finger to stay the destroying element nor warned others of the great danger of a general confiagration. The farmers of the neighborhood were all at work in the hay fields, and although some of them saw the flames, none of them were aware of the danger until about four P. M., when it commenced to spread in a fearful manner.

miril about four P. M., when it commenced to spread in a fearful manner.

The Course of the Flames was at first eastward, towards Boulevard station, driven by a light westerly wind. About midnight Saturday night the wind changed to northeast and the flames commenced to run south towards Babylon and the more thickly populated sections. The alarm now became general, and as many as 500 men were at this time fighting the flames. Sunday morning found a tract overruit two and a half now became general, and as many as 500 men were at this time flighting the flames. Sunday morning found a tract overrun two and a half miles east and west, and nearly three miles south, but little fear was entertained that the fire would run further south, and it looked as if the force of the conflagration was spent. About this time the wind commenced to freshen and blow from the southeast. The flames gained new headway and commenced to run directly towards Deer Park.

At two o'clock Sunday afternoon the snoke was so dense in the houses of Deer Park that the inmates could not stay in them. The entire the inmates could not stay in them. The entire heavens were black, as if a dense cloud of smoke hung overhead. The roaring of the dames, the sound of falling trees, the shouts of the men and the darkness of night, which hung over what seemed to be a doomed village were Truly Appalling.

The school house fence was already on fine, and the people were busily engaged in hastily removing the valuables from their homes, when of a sudden it commenced to rain. For when of a sudden it commenced to rain. For an hour the rain poured in torrents. At first it did not have much effect on the devouring flames, but before a half hour was over it was evident that the village was saved. The men who had been at work so long took new heart, and by nightfall the fire was conquered. The tellowing are some of

On Sunday, during the most exciting time, deer and rabbits were seen crossing the road to Babylon and the railroad in large numbers. A large field of corn on the north of the railroad caught fire and burned like so much tinder. Hundreds of acres of grass were also burned. From twenty-five to fifty miles of fence shared the same fate, as well as a num-ber of thousand feet of timber. On Sunday afternoon a large pile of railroad ties com menced to burn, but it was immediately put out by the foreman of the railroad squad.

Before the shower on Sunday there had been no rain in this vicinity for six weeks and everything was dry and badly parched. The shower seems to have been confined to a very narrow tract of country, for it did not rain either a mile north or south of the burned district.—N. Y. Herald.

A FRIGHTFUL CRIME.

Wholesale Murders in Algeria. In the Courier d'Oran a frightful crime is recorded, which, even in the unhappy country of Algeria, has hardly been paralleled. On the 27th of May, at Mascara, about seven o'clock in the morning, an Arab, who had been known in the morning, marabout living management. as a wandering marabout, living upon alms, secreted from a butcher's shop an ax, and, hiding it under his bournous, posted himself upon a bridge. This particular bridge, especially on Friday, is crowded with people going to market—Arabs, Jews and Europeans being indiscriminately mixed. Into this crowd the fanatic rushed, striking from behind with his axe, and in less than ten minutes felling fourteen persons to the ground. A terrible con-sternation took possession of all present. The neighboring shopkeepers closed their shops, the wounded were carried away, but no one seemed to have attempted to seize the mis-creant. At last two Spahis after a desperate struggle secured him, and he was conveyed to the Bureau Arabe Militaire, where, after some delay, the civil and military authorities arrived to inquire into the matter. It is noteworthy that the victims were selected solely from the European population, the Arabs not only being spared, but exhorted to help in the slaugh ter. As the Arabs were mustered in large numbers at the time, from 1,500 to 2,000, and always carry long knives, any infection of fanaticism might have had fearful results. As it is, the lives of several of the wounded persons are despaired of.

OBITUARY.

Senor C. Jose Morales Lemus.

Señor Morales Lemus, the Minister from the republic of Cuba to the United States, died at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, at his residence, No. 368 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. He had been for some time past afflicted with heart disease, which was intensified of late by the constant labor and excitement he was compelled to undergo in his efforts to advance the cause of his native land. On more than one occasion his physicians expressed a fear that unless he took more rest and avoided the discussion of subjects calculated the discussion of subjects calculated the subjects of the control of pressed a fear that unless he took more rest and avoided the discussion of subjects calculated to excite him that there was danger of his lesing his life. And it is altogether probable that the recent letter of President Grant to Congress and the subsequent action of the House of Representatives on the resolutions of General Banks hastened, to some extent, the end of his life.

The deceased Minister was born at Gibara, Cuba, in the month of May, 1808. His early years were spent at Holquin, a place which has become prominent since the outbreak of the pending contest. Here he received as good an education as the island afforded, his family being a wealthy one. At the early age of twenty years, while yet a student of law, Señor Lemus married Señora Rosario Portero. Seven years later he received his degree as lawyer, and entering into practice, soon became distinguished in his profession. He also acquired reputation in Cuba and to some extent in Spain, as an able writer on legal questions. Long known to all his acquaintances and friends as an unswerving opponent of Spanish rule in Cuba he welcomed the revolutionary outbreak of 1868, and at once gave it his hearty support. cionary outbreak of 1868, and at once gave it his hearty support. He was appointed by President Cespedes on a mission to the United States, and arrived in this city in January of last year. All that he could do to aid his compatriots was done. He endeavored to obtain recognition of belligerency, and, as we know, failed. He made every effort to prevent the departure of the Spanish gunboats from New York, but without success. Several expeditions were despatched by him to Cuba, but the most important of all that commanded the most important of all, that commanded by the late General Goicouria and Colonel Ryan, was prevented leaving by the vigilance of the United States authorities. Notwithstanding his many failures Señor Lemus never relaxed his efforts to secure the triumph of the Cuban cause. Too far advanced in years to fight in person, he gave his civil services and his fortune to his country. He was, in fact, a devoted patriot, whose loss to Cuba will be severely felt. The deceased leaves a widow and brother, both of whom are in this country. On Friday afternoon his remains will be taken to Greenwood and deposited in a vault, where they will rest until the time arrives when they can be removed to Cuba.
