THE GREAT MASTER.

Jean Ingelow and Dickens. The Boston Transcript publishes this extract from a private letter from Jean Ingelow: "You know by this time the loss we have sustained in the death of Charles Dickens. Lit-erature seems to have lost her king, and one to whom almost all were loyal. He was the lord of laughter and of tears. The old dress in which mortals used to be presented to us by authors had grown shabby, but he dressed buman nature anew, showed it to us as we had never seen it before. He made what was homely and lowly draw near, to be looked at Holmes on Dickens. 6 In his oration at Harvard College yesterday Oliver W. Holmes said of Charles Dickens: We have just seen a life finished whose We have just seen a life finished whose whole compass was included within the remembered years of many among us. Why was our great prose mit trel mourned by nations and buried with kings? Because he vindicated humanity, not against its Maker, but against itself. Because he took the part of his frail, erring, sorrowing, dying fellow-creatures, against the demonologists, who had pretended to write the history of human nature, with a voice that touched the heart as no other had done since the Scotch peasant was laid down to slumber in the soil his song had hallowed. We are not called to mourn over his frailties as we must sorrow in remembering those of the sweet singer of Scotland; but we all need forgiveness, and Scotland; but we all need forgiveness, and there must be generous failings in every true manhoed, which it makes Heaven itself happier to pardon. "I am very human," Dickens said to me one of the last times I met him; and so I feel as if I might repeat a few of the tribute to the memory of Robert Burns, in tender remembrance of Charles Dickens. We praise him—not for gift divine, His muse was born of woman; His manhood breathes in every line;

Aye, heaven had set one living man Beyond the pedant's tether; His virtues, frailties, he may scan, Who weighs them altogether. A Household Monument to Charles Dickens.

To the Editor of the New York Times:—As there is good reason to believe that Charles Dickens had and has as many appreciating readers in America as in England, I believe that many of them would like to have a living and speaking monument to his genius and worth in their homes. I propose, therefore, to make a collection of the newspaper notices of his death which appeared in different countries the next day after that event, or on the 9th of June; also of allusions to his life and works made in the pulpit on Sunday, the 12th. I am collecting such notices of the great writer as appeared on those days in Great Britain, France, Germany and other European countries, and hope that half the volume may be made up of American tributes to the great departed. Such a volume will not only be a living monument to his inexhaustible covirs, and worth but also to the ability only bea living monument to his inexhaustible genius and worth, but also to the ability which submarine telegraphs give to kindred and sympathising nations to stand side by side, in equal sorrow, at the death-bed of a great benefactor to his race, and to hear, across widely-divided continents, the first and last strokes of the bell that tolls over his grave.

I shall, therefore, be exceedingly obliged to those who may sympathize with this tribute to Charles Dickens, if they will send me any copies of newspapers of June 9, or any ex-copies of newspapers of June 9, or any extracts of sermons preached on the 12th, containing notices of his life and influences, or any generous sentiments in reference to his sudden and lamented death. Let me beg such kind helpers in the work to direct their contributions to, what will be my address in a few weeks,

The appearance and customs of the Indians of the Isthmus are singular. They keep their women as much as possible secluded from the view of the whites. The natives are copperately that it is a second view of the winters. The natives are copper-colored, short in stature, with deep chests, straight black hair, black eyes and high check bones. The masculine costume is thin calico pantaloons and shirts. SWARTHMORE COLLEGE.

(Correspondence of the Philadelphia avening Bulletin.) SWARTHMORE COLLEGE, DELAWARE Co. PA., June 29.—The closing exercises of the first year of this institution took place to-day, and notwithstanding the intense heat a large number of the friends and patrons of the College were present. As it only opened last year, there were, of course, no graduates, but the Freshman class of about twenty of both sexes passed a very successful examination, and will constitute the Sophomore class of next year. About an equal number of those who are now connected with the preparatory department will enter the Freshman class for rection of a Board of Managers, chartered by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, but indirectly under the direction of the New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore Yearly Meetings of the Society of Friends, or rather that branch commonly called Hicksites. It is intended for the equal education of the sexes, and will be largely patronized by Friends throughout the country, being the only institution of the grade under the control of this branch of the society of this continent. The first vary's average under the control of this branch of the society on this continent. The first year's experiment has been very successful, and the President Land the faculty feel much encouraged. The establishment of the college is a long step forward in the educational system of the Society, it having in the past seldom taken any care to secure to its children anything beyond an ordinary higheshool education. Some of the dinary high-school education. Some of the older Friends still look with suspicion on this as a departure from the ancient ways of the Society. One step further is badly needed, and that is the introduction of musical instruction. The lack of music was sadly felt in the exercises of to-day. Some of the younger members shall be taken, but they must move cautiously, for the "conservative" will make this their "last ditch," and light as hard as their peace principles will let them. All unprejudiced outsiders will heartily wish the musical party success.

The buildings are very large and handsome

The buildings are very large and handsome and reflect great crediton Mr.Addison Hutton, the architect, who designed them. The grounds are shortly to be put in good order; an efficient landscape-gardener having been employed for the purpose, and the buildings and surrounings will soon be as handsome as those of any educational establishment in the State.

As the College is the only one in the country under the control of the Society of Friends:

try under the control of the Society of Friends, it will draw students from all the States and doubtless continue with the same prosperity and vigor that has marked the first year of its existence. Date.

STRANGE STORY OF A MURDER. A Man and Woman Murdered in an Emigrant Wagon-Their Daughter Escapes.

[From the Cleveland Herald]
On Wednesday evening, June 22d, Mr.
Benehoff, of Greenville, Pa., came to Warren Ohio, having in charge a young girl, aged 14 years, who gave her name as Sarah Jane Cornelis, only daughter of Thomas Cornelis, late of Jackson, Hardin county, Ohio, Shereports a terrible tragedy as occurring on last-friday morning, a few miles west or south of Warran.

She says that her father sold his farm, within about seven miles of Kenton, some time since, for $5,000, and that on the 7th inst., the husband, wife, and that on the rich there, to a new band, wife, and daughter left there for a new home in Erie county, Pennsylvania. That they traveled in a two-horse wagon, running-gear red, bed blue, and had a black oil-cloth cover. They "camped out" at night, did their own cooking, and slept in the wagon. Last Thursday night or Friday morning she was awakened by the cry from her mother, "They are killing your father!" She saw a man attack her mother, striking her—her mother gave a scream, but made no further noise.

The circl says abe, then crawled out, of the The girl says she then crawled out of the nind end of the wagon, and ran and hid in the undergrowth near by. One of the murderers said, "Where is that girl?" The other responded, "No matter about her, we must be getting out of this."

They then hitched up the team and drove off with the wagon, taking the bodies of the murdered man and woman with them. The child says she ran after them, and kept as near the wagon as she could for five or six miles, being guided by the sound. She claims to being guided by the sound. She claims to have lost the track of the wagon when it passed through Warren at break of day on Friday morning. She continued in a northeasterly course, and on Saturday reached Greenville, Penn., nearly crazed and famished. Her story was not credited at first, but a number of citizens, after a thorough catechizing of the girl for a couple of days, became satisfied that she was not deceiving them. From her description of the last large town she had passed through, they concluded it was Warren. The girl was brought over the road Wednesday, and recognized it as the one she had traveled. She claims to recognize Warren as the place she last heard the wagon, and says she came in across the bridge leading out says she came in across the bridge leading out on the Canfield road. If true, the murder must have occurred somewhere between Warren and Canfield.

The girl says her father had on his person about $7,000.

about $7,000.

She gives the names of persons residing near her former home, in Hardin county. An uncle on her mother's eide, named Colfax; knows Mr. Baker and Mr. Kingsley, neighbors.

The child seems artless and truthful. Like children usually are, raised in retired sections, the is cuite diffident and bythful in the she is quite diffident and bashful in the presence of strangers. It does not seen probable she could concoct such a terrible tory out of nothing, and appear as fair as she

Pittsburgh is about to enjoy a sensation, for, on the 16th day of June next, the Nonparell Club of that city is to give a pic-nic at Glen-wood Grove, and a rowing-match between such young ladies as may then be of an aquatic turn of mind. In this sport she who is entitled to wear the victor's crown shall be pre-sented with a beautiful gold watch and chain. Several emulous and ambitious oarswomen Several emulous and ambitious oarswomen have already entered the lists, among them Miss Lottie McAlice, Miss Sherridan and Miss Whalen. The local papers describe Miss Lottie as a lovely girl, hardly past her third lustrum, and as being so enthusiastic in the cause that she not only practices with the oars daily, but arises at the poetic hour of "five o'clock in the morning," then to take a long walk. Miss Whalen lives with her parents in a floating house on the south side, and is said to be skilful at guiding a skiff, although when, a short time ago, she made her first essay with a scull, she received a most ignominious ducking in the turbid waters of the Monongahela. The club is in constant receipt of letters from ambitious is in constant receipt of letters from ambittous maidous who wish to join in the sport, and, as the regatta is to be open to all comers, a beau-tiful sight will be seen on the coming 16th. Some ungallant carsmen of the dingy city de-precate the movement; and one of them refused even to let the lovely Lottie try his scull. Should such contemptible spite be generally shown, there may be expected, in the words of the Canadian Boatsong, a "row, brothers, row."

FACTS AND FANCIES.

[From the Overland Monthly.] Dickens in Camp.

Above the pines the moon was slowly drifting,

The river sang below; The dim Sierras, far beyond, uplifting Their minarets of snow:

The roaring camp-fire, with rude humor, painted
The ruddy tints of health
On haggard face and form that drooped and fainted

In the fierce race for wealth:

Till one arose, and from his pack's scant treas. A hoarded volume drew,
And cards were dropped from hands of listless

leisure To hear the tale anew;

And then, while round them shadows gathered faster, And as the fire-light fell,

He read aloud the book wherein the Master Had writ of "Little Nell." Perhaps 'twas boyish fancy—for the reader ... Was youngest of them all— But, as he read, from clustering pine and

A silence seemed to fall; The fir-trees, gathering closer in the shadows, Listened in every spray, While the whole camp, with "Nell" on English meadows Wandered and lost their way.

And so in mountain solitudes—o'ertaken As by some spell divine—
Their cares dropped from them like the needles shaken. . From out the gusty pine.

Lost is that camp, and wasted all its fire:
And he who wrought that spell? And he who wrought that spen ;
Ah, towering pine and stately Kentish spire,
Ye have one tale to tell!

Lost is that camp! but let its fragrant story
Blend with the breath that thrills
With hop-vines' incense all the pensive glory That fills the Kentish hills. And on that grave where English oak, and holly, And laurel wreaths entwine,

Deem it not all a too presumptuous folly— This spray of Western pine! —The list of violent deaths in England and Wales counts up 83,000 the past year. -If a man gets up when the day breaks, can —A good story is told of a wag named El-more, who was a member of the Wisconsin: Legislature some years ago. He had a pet measure of local interest before the House, and before it was finally acted on he took a vaca-tion, on returning from which he moved the passage of his bill, and made a neat and elepassage of his oil, and made a neat and ele-gant speech in support of his motion. The Speaker could enjoy a joke as well as Elmoro, and after listening with great attention till the conclusion of the speech, he quietly told "the gentleman from Waukesha" that the bill referred to had passed the House in his ab-senceseveral days before! His fellow mem-bers enjoyed the scene very much, but Elmore, not at all discomitted, cried out, as he readjusted his spectacles, "Mr. Speaker, then I withdraw that little speech!"

A CHANGE OF FORTUNE.

Another Thaddeus of Warsaw. Polish count, named Christianus Bernadofski, is now working as a journeyman in a harnessmaker's shop in Galesburg, Illinois He was born in Warsaw in 1833. In 1863 he was involved in one of the Polish rebellions, but escaped to this country, while his estates were confiscated, and his mother died, his father having previously been killed in a skirmish. The Galesburg Republican says of

"In his weary wanderings through this country he once obtained the position of professor of languages in a college in Minnesota, but was forced to abandon the place because he could not obtain sufficient salary to support him in the commonest style commensurate with the situation conferred. He resigned the empty dignity, and set in with a harness-maker in a neighboring town to learn the business, but could not obtain enough from him even to get the necessities of life. After many wanderings he finally arrived in Galesburg some two years since, and for the past six or seven two years since, and for the past six or seven months has found employment in the harness-shop of Mr. Isaac Merrill. Last winter he received intelligence that a free pardon had been extended to him by the Czar Alexander. It had, however, become so utterly valueless that he refused to accept it—his estates had been confiscated, and his friends and relatives are either dead or banished. Thus bereft of hope, the scion of an ancient and noble family works in a humble capacity for his daily bread."
