MONTHLY PETROLEUM REPORT.

Production—Development—Number of New Wells Drilling—Stock of Petroleum in the Region—Shipments—The Price, Exports, &c., &c.

[From the Titusville Herald.]

Production.

The month of June was not marked by the striking of as many new and productive wells as the month preceding, yet the production was steadily increased during the month, above the decline in many of the old producing districts, and exhibits for the month under review a gain of about six hundred and fifty barrels per day. While many of the oil tracts throughout the region exhibit no important change in the yield, several localities show a decline of fifty to two hundred barrels per day, while upon others the decrease and increase were such as to maintain an average production in the aggregate, that does not differ essentially from former reports. The weather during the month was favorable for operations, and there were few stoppages upon the farms bordering upon or adjacent to Oil Creek.

In the Parker's Landing district the increase was due mainly to the use of torpedoes, though several productive wells were struck in various portions of the territory that produced from twenty to fifty barrels daily, and increased the production as mentioned above the decline in the older wells.

The average gravity of the product shows no important change during the month under review, though there is reason to believe that in some localities more benzine has been used than during the preceding months of the year.

There is perhaps more "wild catting," or independent operating in untried and apparently valueless territory being conducted at present than at any time previous since the discovery of oil. In the vicinity of the Allegheny river, between Tidioute and Tionesta, several "wild cat" or test wells have been finished or are being drilled.

The Stock.

The entire stock of petroleum in the region upon the first of July shows a decrease of about thirty thousand barrels from that of the preceding month, being 321,840 barrels, against 351,168 upon the first day of June. This includes the stock in iron tanks, at the wells, and in the tanks of refiners and pipe companies at all points in the oil regions. In some instances the stock in iron tanks has been included with the stock at the wells, the refiners and pipe line stocks also being included in this table, the latter amounting to about sixteen thousand barrels (aside from that included in the iron tanks), and comprising the stocks at Titusville, Miller, Petroleum Centre, Rynd Farm, Oil City, Tidioute, McClintock and Tarr farms, Pithole, Shamburg, West Pithole, Bean and Huidekooper farms.

The Shipments.

The shipments of crude equivalent for the month of June were 473,841 barrels, or 56,960 barrels in excess of those for the preceding month. The shipments by river were nearly 40,000 in excess of those of June, the principal portion of which were from Oleopolis and at points south of Oil City. The shipments of refined oil aggregated over forty thousand barrels, of which Philadelphia received about fifteen and New York twenty thousand barrels.

Prices.

Prices throughout the month averaged less than during May. The opening figure being $4 25 upon the Upper and $4 35 upon the Lower Creek and the closing price $3 90 and $4 10 upon the Upper and Lower roads respectively. The best prices paid were at the beginning of the month, a steady decline marking each week until the close.

Petroleum Exports.

The following table shows the amount of petroleum exported from January 1st, 1870, to June 1st, 1870, and from all other ports from January 1st to June 30th, 1870:

TRAGEDY AT KINGSTON, R. I.

A Mother Drowns Two Children and Herself—A Sad Case of Temporary Insanity.

The Providence Journal says:

Mrs. Mary E. Smith, aged thirty-three years, wife of Mr. Jeremiah Smith, residing on their farm, one mile north of Slocumsville, in North Kingston, drowned her only daughter, Mary E., aged three years, and her youngest son, Jeremiah E., aged eleven weeks, some time Friday night, by taking them out of bed while asleep and throwing them into a rain-water cistern, containing water four feet deep. She then jumped in herself. This terrible proceeding occurred without waking her husband, who occupied another bed with his eldest son, of about five years. Search was made Saturday morning by Mr. Smith and the neighbors, and the mother and children were found in the cistern, the babe only floating.

The cistern was about twenty feet from the back door, and contained about four feet of water. The curb was some two feet high from the ground, built of boards, with an opening of about eighteen inches square, and tapering to about thirteen at the bottom, which was some three feet from the water. From appearances, Mrs. Smith had undressed the children and put them to bed as usual, hanging up their clothes in their wonted positions, waited till both were asleep, then taking off her shoes, that she might not disturb her husband, who was sleeping up stairs with the elder boy, had taken them from the bedroom, through the sitting-room and kitchen, out of the back door to the cistern, probably going twice, and then jumped in herself. It would seem almost beyond belief that she could force herself through so small an aperture as the lower part of the cistern curb, only thirteen inches by about fifteen, and that, too, without disturbing a trough which extended an inch or two into one end, or wrenching the rotten and broken boards apart. When found she was dressed, with the exception of shoes and stockings, and the sleeves to her dress were pinned up as when at work about the house. Her arms, near the elbows, were bruised and scraped, caused, doubtless, while forcing herself through the curb, but otherwise there were no marks on the body. Mrs. Smith, it is supposed, was insane at the time.

THE REWARD OF VIRTUE.

A Man and a Maid of Honor.

A rather romantic incident occurred the other day, at the Court of ex-Queen Isabella of Spain. One of her maids of honor, a beautiful young lady, lost her pocket-book containing eight hundred francs. On the next day it was returned to the Queen by a handsome young peasant, who had found it. Not a centime was missing, and the Queen asked the honest finder what reward he asked. The young fellow had noticed the pretty owner of the pocket-book and had seen how glad she seemed to get it back, and so he turned to the Queen and said boldly: "I only desire a kiss from the young lady." The Queen smiled, and glancing over to her maid of honor she said: "Will you grant him his request, Carmen?" Carmen reflected for a moment, and then rushed toward the young peasant and clasping her arms around his neck kissed him three times amid the laughter of the by standers.

THE ORANGE RIOT IN NEW YORK.

Three Persons Killed and One Hundred Wounded—A Frightful Scene of Riot and Bloodshed in Eighty-sixth Street.

The New York Herald says:

One of the most dreadful riots that has occurred in this city for a number of years disgraced the metropolis yesterday—a religious feud, growing out of the cherished hate Orangemen or ultra Protestant Irishmen bear towards their Catholic fellow countrymen—a hate which is returned with interest.

For some weeks past it was advertised that the "American Protestant Association" intended to commemorate the battle of the Boyne on the 12th of July by a picnic at Elm Park, Ninety-second street and Eighth avenue, and invitations were sent to the lodges of the Order in adjacent cities. The cards of invitation bore the motto "Welcome to All." Ample preparation was made for the festivity, and, as the result showed, many of the members of the association did not forget to provide themselves with arms to resist any attack that might be made upon them by Catholic Irish on their line of march. While the entertainment was intended to be held in the name of the Protestant Association, it was specially under the auspices of Enniskillen Lodge, No. 29. Among those lodges specially invited were Gideon Lodge, Prince of Orange Lodge, No. 339, and an Orange lodge from Newark, N. J.

At an early hour yesterday morning they marched up Broadway with banners flaunting and the orange colors decorating their persons. Their extended through the boulevard, where many of the Irish citizens of the upper wards were working, and it was some time after noon when they arrived at the park, which is in Ninety-second street, near Eighth avenue. It is stated that all along the line of march those in the procession made use of remarks calculated to irritate the Catholics whom they met by the roadside, and that the band played only such pieces as the "Boyne Water," &c. Arrived at the Park a little after one o'clock P. M., a disposition was made of the forces, with loud boasts as to their power to repel any attack from Fenians or Catholics, and the entire number, amounting to between two and three thousand, soon after assembled around the platform to hear a speech from Mr. John G. Bonn, Worshipful Grand Master of the Orangemen.

The delivery of the speech, which was full of the usual buncombe and sectarian allusions, occupied half an hour, at the expiration of which time the crowd engaged in dancing.

The Attack.

In the meantime the Irish laborers, who had become excited by the conduct of the parading party, gathered in a crowd and marched up the Boulevard, compelling the laborers they met to stop work, and adding to their ranks those employed in the Park, near the avenue.

At half-past three some fifty laborers rounded the corner of Ninety-second street and Eighth avenue, and appeared in front of the Park, while at the same time an equal number appeared in the rear of the buildings, where they broke down the fence and began throwing a volley of stones at the assembled Orangemen. The Orangemen replied with pistols, and an then took place.

A panic ensued among the Orangemen, who scattered in every direction, while the Irish or Fenians, as they were called, rushed in upon the grounds armed with pickaxes, baseball clubs, wheel spokes and stones. The retreating ones made for the cars on the Eighth avenue, but in passing down found the rioters arranged on each side of the avenue, and upon the appearance of an orange scarf or bow a car was deluged with

A shower of Stones.

The windows of many cars were demolished, and their sides stove in, while many of the occupants were severely wounded. Some of the stones hurled into the cars weighed fifteen and twenty pounds. Women and children were seen hurrying in every direction, and many of them were severely injured by being struck by stray stones and by their falls over rocks in their efforts at escape.

Women with Babes

in their arms were severely bruised, and many of the regular passengers were more or less injured. Many hid themselves in the corners of fences and behind shrubs and rocks, where they lay upon their faces till

The Police Arrived.

Superintendent Jourdan early despatched a force, and at 4 o'clock detachments arrived from the Eighth, Ninth, Fifteenth, Sixteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-second and Twenty-third precincts, headed by Sergeants Dilles and Jameson. These, to the number of about one hundred and fifty, drove back the rioters and cleared the ground, not, however, without some accidents. Officer Shield was shot in the neck, Officer Cooke received a blow over the eye from a stone and another officer was shot in the leg.

No full list of either the killed or wounded can be made at this time, as many were carried away by their friends as they fell.

The scene in the station house as two of the dead were recognized was truly affecting. The bodies, which had been taken below, were placed in a ghastly row awaiting identification. After some waiting the father of the boy James Brady, and another son, having heard of his death, went to view his body, and was horrified by the sight. While attending to his work he was attracted by the sound of the shots, and standing listlessly for a moment on the sidewalk he received two bullets in the head, and now lay before them almost covered with blood.

The large force of police who had been hurried up from the down town stations were placed at different places along the road, and a number were also sent with each car going down to prevent any attempt at further disturbance. The heavy rain which fell about six o'clock did not help to lighten the dreariness of the scene, rendered doubly dreary by the wild rumors which prevailed of a large number of killed and wounded.

FREAK OF AN INSANE WOMAN.

A Lancaster Sensation.

The Lancaster Intelligencer says:

Before daybreak this morning there was discovered in front of the Court House two banners constructed of muslin and papers of various colors, containing religious mottoes and crosses, and accompanied by a number of long letters addressed to different persons and professing to give explanations of the devices of the banners, and a history of the writer's life, together with an incoherent jumble of nonsense about Presidents Davis, Lincoln and Grant, J. Wilkes Booth, Thad. Stevens, and other celebrities. The writer claims that Booth is alive and well, and that Thad. Stevens is in purgatory awaiting the prayers of the public. The banners were taken possession of by George Miller, and are now in his restaurant in Court avenue. They are the work of a crazy woman named Elizabeth Kalley, residing in Groffstown, who, it will be recollected, made a similar display in front of the Court House on St. Patrick's day. It seems to have been the intention of Mrs. Kalley to have hung out her banners on the 4th of July, but on that day she was locked up, and did not have until this morning an opportunity of displaying them. The larger of the banners is eight or ten feet long, mounted on a quilting-frame, and near the bottom of it is a good-looking china doll, dressed in silk coat and pants, and intended to represent J. Wilkes Booth, for whom she seems to have a special regard. The weight of the banners, and the distance from her residence to the Court House, would seem to indicate that she had some assistance in conveying them there.

SERIOUS RIOT AT GADSDEN, S. C.

The Military Called Out.

We learn, says the Columbia (S. C.) Phœnix, that a very serious difficulty, resulting in the death of at least one person by a bayonet thrust, occurred at Gadsden Saturday. It seems that a meeting was being held for the purpose of appointing delegates to the Radical Nominating Convention, which assembles in this city on the 22d, when the friends of the different parties, not satisfied with abusive language, came to blows. From the mass of exciting reports in circulation, it would seem that Philip Epstein (white) called Senator Nash a —— liar, when the latter knocked him off the platform. Some of Nash's friends resented the insulting language and assaulted Epstein; whereupon, a colored man, named Wash Bynum, drew his knife and used it indiscriminately and effectively, wounding not less than seven or eight persons.

Bynum was run through the body with a bayonet and instantly killed. The fight now became general, bayonets and fence-rails being the weapons used. One of Governor Scott's militia companies was on parade, which accounts, our informants say, for the presence of the death-dealing implements. Probate Judge Wigg, Senator Nash, Representative Thompson and other prominent Republican office-holders and seekers were present, but succeeded, by a proper use of their legs, in reaching the railway train. A colored man, named Sye Davis, says he thought he made the best time on record, but found that the individuals mentioned above were equally as good on a run.

It is impossible, owing to the excitement and the contradictory statements, to learn how many persons were severely hurt—the estimates ranging from thirty to one hundred. The last seen of Mr. Epstein he was making good time down the road, pursued by several infuriated colored men, with rails in their hands, and serious fears are entertained for his safety. The crowd was so dense on the railroad that the train was forced to move slowly for some time, to avoid crushing into the excited mass. Passengers assure us that when the train left the battle was being vigorously kept up, and doubtless other lives were lost. One member of the "Republican Band," of this city, was wounded in the leg and face. We learn by telegraph from Kingsville that when the down train passed everything was quiet. All the parties connected with the affair are Republicans.

THE GREAT IRISH WARRIOR.

Gen. O'Neill, the Fenian, in a Bad Fix—Appeal for Aid.

The Pittsburgh Dispatch has the following:

The Fenian cause has had so many ups and downs, that the inquiry "What has become of the Fenians" is often heard. We cannot speak as regards the entire army, but so far as concerns General O'Neill the following letter, addressed to Dr. E. Donnelly, of our city, explains itself:

IN JAIL AT BURLINGTON, VT., July 8, 1870.
—My Dear Doctor: I received the despatch containing the "interview" had with you on your return from Malone and Canandaigua, and feel very grateful for it and the kindly manner in which you referred to myself. It is certainly very gratifying to me, to know that one of the truest and bravest of the men, who, on two occasions, in 1866 and 1870, went forth to risk their lives for Ireland, is not willing to join in the unjust, lying and cowardly attacks that have been made upon me. I have a statement of my connection with the F. B. from first to last, nearly completed, and shall publish it, in pamphlet form, as soon as I can get the necessary means for printing, &c.

Notwithstanding all the money that I made out of the Fenian Brotherhood, as reported by that immaculate body, called the Senate, I am here, in prison, without a dollar to fee a lawyer, or a cent to buy a newspaper, stationery, postage stamps, etc. The Sheriff in charge of the prison has been kind enough to furnish me with stationery and postage stamps. I shall be happy to hear from you at any time, and, if you have no objection, would like to receive a short letter from you to be published with my report.

Have you heard from the Red River expedition? Write soon.

Very truly, your friend,
JOHN O'NEILL.

THE BONAPARTE FOOLISHNESS.

Donn Piatt on Betsy Patterson and the Heart-Broken Josephine.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial.]

The late death of Jerome has revived the half-forgotten stories connected with his mother's so-called marriage. I know quite a number of ancient cheese-waxes in Washington who live on these stories, and I have been considerably bored by oft-told tales of how the pretty little Betsie Patterson made up her mind to capture Jerome Bonaparte soon as she heard of his arrival in New York, and how she did it. It is told as a wonder that she acquired French so as to speak it in ninety days, and, meeting the reprobate on the race-course near Baltimore, so captivated the rascal that he followed his wooing up to a marriage.

It is all very interesting, but not very creditable to an American girl. Her parents knew, her friends knew, and she ought to have known, and probably did, that such marriage was null and void in France under the Empire, where the consent of Napoleon was necessary to make such union legal. No one knew it better than the scamp Jerome himself. The parties most interested should have waited for that consent. But they probably knew they would have to wait some time. The great Napoleon himself was considered an impudent parvenu by the crowned heads of Europe, with no claim to consideration but his brain, and that was of as little account, in the fashionable world of Europe then, as it is among the select circles of Baltimore to-day. It was not likely that the Emperor would consent to his brother's marriage with the granddaughter of a cobbler and the daughter of a ship-builder.

To one possessed of opportunities to know all about the real life of the Bonapartes, the sentimental talk indulged in by Americans of the heart-broken Josephine and the blighted Bessie Patterson is very entertaining. The lovely Josephine was a hard case, if the stories current in Paris are to be relied on; and if the beautiful Betsy was anything like the venerable Patterson Bonaparte, she could hold her own, without much blighting, with the worst or best of them.

If there is any one thing more sickening than another, it is an American snob. Laborers ourselves, and the children of laborers, we make ourselves simply ridiculous when we dishonor the graves of our fathers in attempting to be other than what we are.

—The following rather plain statement of facts is detailed on a tombstone at Hoosick Falls:

RUTH SPRAGUE,

Died 1846, aged 9 years, 4 months and 3 days. She was stolen by Roderick R. Clow; her body was dissected at the office of Dr. P. Armstrong, Hoosick, N. Y., where her mutilated remains were found, and deposited here.

Her body dissected by fiendish men,
Her bones anatomized;
Her soul we trust has risen to God,
Where few physicians rise.

PHILADELPHIA ART.

Our Animal Painters.

At Peter Moran's studio, No. 1334 Chestnut street, we have seen some truly excellent pictures, representing different phases of life among the dumb animals, and generally composed and studied with thoughtful care from the life. An excellent interior, with an ancient woman surrounded by the family pets, reminds one, in its treatment of the female head and the background, of the delicate work of M. Paul Soyer. It is a veritable Ecouen cabinet-piece painted in Philadelphia. This is called "Domestic Felicity." Another figure which struck our eye was that of a goat, in a fresh country-scene, whose drawing Otto Weber would not be ashamed of, and which shows, as its head turns, the bluish shadow of the horns imprinted on the silky white neck. A picture called "The First Snow," and another winter scene, give opportunity for the introduction of some well-painted sheep, in characteristic attitudes. A sketch for the dog-picture representing poverty and riches, exceeds in spirit the finished canvas, which we were admiring the other day in Sauter's window.

Another excellent dog-subject represents, a good deal in the vein of Landseer, a cavalier's hat and sword watched in the owner's absence by the faithful eyes of his hound. Mr. Moran, in our opinion, succeeds better with his dogs than with any other animal he represents, by close attention to a few models which are apparently kept always near him, and from whose attitudes and colors he is able to produce quite a gallery of apparently dissimilar compositions.

Mr. Moran's health, we are glad to learn, has recently improved, under a judicious country regimen among kind friends.

Animal painting in this city appears to have survived the withdrawal of Mr. Bispham, and to be in a commendably flourishing state. Not to mention the exquisite work of Mr. Eyres, whose genre is dead game, and the vigorous bird painting of Mr. Juillard, whose pencil is recently lost to us by death, we have those spirited animal compositions of Peter Moran, and, in a lower plane, the rising and improving talent of Mr. Newbold H. Trotter.

On the easel of the latter gentleman we have recently seen a large and interesting subject representing sheep driven to shelter under a thunder-storm. A large flock, in which no two animals have the same position, is cantering across the fields under the persuasion of the shepherd and his dog. The currents, so to speak, in this throng of active life, as the wrong-headed creatures follow each other in false detours, or gather into a frightened mass where the dog hems them in, are expressed with much intelligence; and a good landscape and sky—in which Mr. Trotter seldom wholly fails—back up the composition. Another telling subject—Alderneys strayed into a neighbor's clover-field—has just been sold to a New York gentleman, and a number of works by the artist may be seen at Earle's gallery. They all exhibit, along with a crudity of color and chiaroscuro that we expect time will modify, a good landscape sentiment, and much ingenuity in constructing dramas out of animal life.

A FEARFUL PICTURE.

Corruption in the Austrian Court.

Correspondents from Vienna give a most deplorable picture of the corruption existing in the higher official circles of Austria. They represent the state of the Government about as bad as under Louis XV. in France. No advancement is possible unless secured through the influence of the mistresses of some of the ruling courtiers. They sell, in a shameless manner, almost publicly, positions in the army and offices of trust. Among the instances quoted is that of the Consul-General of Austria to Egypt. This man, who receives an annual salary of twenty thousand guilders, is known to receive a similar sum from the Viceroy of Egypt. One of the Judges of the Supreme Court, Hofrath Schwab, who obtained his position through the influence of one of the frail ladies that rule there, was recently sentenced to the penitentiary for fraud, because his many actions of dishonesty had become too glaring. The man who stands at the head of the railroad enterprises in Austria, appointed by the Government, was dishonestly discharged from the State service, years ago, for gross defalcation, and his first subaltern has been punished for theft. One of the managers of the Imperial Treasury used to be a common police spy. And many more such instances could be given.
