THE WAR.

Our Cable Telegrams from Europe grow more and more exciting. Although no trustworthy report of any severe engagement has yet been received, the news indicates that when hostilities do begin, they will be on a grand scale.

RECEPTIONS.

The reception business has been sufficiently covered in Philadelphia. It is to be hoped that it will soon begin to cure itself. Every organizing organization of any kind that chooses to get up an excursion for itself, be it military, civil or private, is invited to do so.

THE QUESTION.

The question of annexing the Dominican Republic has been the subject of much discussion in Congress. It is not a partisan question, but a national one.

THE QUESTION.

It is a good thing to note that the Sunday papers, yesterday, with one exception, had nothing to say in defence of the Volunteer Fire Department, whose rowdiness on the previous evening had been so severely commented on by the daily papers.

composition for these undesirable results, and we are not to forget that the same class of citizens have found in this visit of the Maryland regiment the feather that breaks the stoutest camel's back.

There was one class of public receptions which Philadelphia used to regard with just pride. During the dark years of the war we daily and nightly received military regiments. Not to regiments bound on gaudy and festive excursions to sea-side ball-rooms.

Not to regiments whose bayonets pointed authoritatively against a color which died with loyal bullets. But regiments pressing steadily to the perilous front, to save their country and win for it the peace which now teaches her to forget them and to praise their deeds.

Suppose that five thousand Americans come here, or having intended to go to Europe, they are now in the city. A moderate estimate, a traveling American spends on the average about five hundred dollars a month—some much more and some much less.
