RAID ON THE RICHMOND WHISKY DISTRICT. This morning about 4 o'clock Revenue Officer Clark, Brooks, Herr, Ghegan and Johnson, and Deputy United States Marshals Murray, Eldridge, Beale and Gregory, accompanied by six other officers, started out for a raid on the illicit distilleries in the Richmond district. The expedition was kept a profound secret, and the early hour at which it was made rendered it quite successful. The officers first visited the "Swamp," which is the appellation by which a small sec-tion back of Salmon and Richmond streets is known. There two stills, with worms and other appurtenances, were seized. The stills were in operation, and the two men who were working them fell into the hands of the raid-

At a place further west on Salmon street, known as "Morney's," two stills and worms, seven and a half barrels of whisky and six hogsheads of molasses were secured The raid was continued around the neighbor-

The raid was continued around the neighborhood, but no more valuable property was found. In various places hegsheads of mash were discovered and were destroyed. The number of hogsheads so disposed of was about relative.

The property seized was safely brought away, and was turned over to the possession of the U.S. Marshal. The men who were arrested were locked up to await a hearing before the U.S. Commis

The King of Bonny.

Some time since we noticed the arrival in Liverpool of his sable majesty, George Pepple, King of Bonny, accompanied by his brother, "Prince" Charles. The King put up at a third-rate temperance coffee-house in Liverpool, and it due time he was "interviewed!" by one of the local reporters, who found the King as dark as ebony, and came away with King as dark as ebony, and came away with a very small opinion of African royalty in point of politeness, dignity, or even bare civility at all times and in all places. The King, however, was perfect master of one part of the business of diplomacy—concealment. He curtly designed to effect one part of the curtly designed as to his ter of one part of the business of diplomacy—concealment. He curtly declined to afford any information as to his probable stay in this country—where he received some slight education a few years ago—his general object in coming here, or any other particulars which it might be supposed that so potent a personage would be willing to convey to the public. Not that the monarch was at all difficult of access, or that he had in his English hostelry surrounded himself with any of those courtly barriers indicative of the divinity that doth hedge a king. The reporter, on applying at the royal resi-The reporter, on applying at the royal residence pro tem, and asking whether "the king" was disengaged, was told to "go up stairs and into the front room on the first landing; you'll find him in there. Nobody's with him." Having been bred, however, in strictly monarchied. him." Having been bred, however, in strictly monarchical principles, the reporter hesitated to intrude on the royal solitude unannounced.

and having hinted his diffidence, a buxom chambermaid led the way, and undertook the duties of lord chamberlain. The courtly funcduties of lord chamberlain. The courtly function was performed in this wise. The buxom lass burst into the royal sanctum without ceremony, and finding the King curled up on the sofa in a post-prandial snooze, seized him roughly by the shoulder, shook him vigorously, and shouted in his ear, "George! George! Here's a gentleman "-emphasis on the word gentleman—"here's a gentleman come to see you." The admirer of monarchical institutions was amazed at this mode of saluting the sleeping impersonation saluting the sleeping impersonation monarchy, and dreading the al wrath when awakened, the aviewer nimbly skipped back out of monarchy, and dreading the royal wrath when awakened, the interviewer nimbly skipped back out of the room, and awaited the royal pleasure on the staircase, but within earshot. The second summons was less reverential than the first. "Come, George, get up quick; a gentleman waiting to see you." Then a gruff guttural voice was heard to yawn and exclaim, "Waiting to see me! What does he want to see me for? Who is he? What does he want?" uttered the voice. "Here is his card," said the lady chamberlain, and bouncing out as uncermoniously as she had bounced into the room, she added, in a friendly stage whisper to the interviewer, "You're to go in. It's all right," accompanying this cheering remark with what was the nearest approach to a friendly jog. Enter the reporter to find the king still curled up on the sofa. He slowly uncurled himself, and still more slowly pulled on his boots. But he did not uncurl-himself. on his boots. But he did not uncurl himself in conversation, though perfectly acquainted with the English language. He spoke in monosyllables, at long intervals, only in answer to questions, and with a most curiously searching look, which it might be impolite to call coming to England was to get influential neople to interfere in the war at Bonny between Oko Jumbo and Ja Ja, the continuance of which was sadly detrimental to King George's authority, even among his own subjects. No public notice, however, has been taken of the king's presence in England, and whether he has been successful in his mission or not is uncertain. But one thing is quite certain, and that is, that he has started on his return to his disturbed kingdom, taking his departure in the African royal mail steamer Biafra, Captain G. H. Corbett. The king was accompanied by his brother, "Prince Charles," and a colored aide-de-camp, whose chief care seemed to be bestowed on two little English dogs, a King Charles spaniel and a Skye terrier, which his royal master is transorting to tropical climes. All three Africans appeared to be quite young men, and not very striking specimens of their race. They were dressed in ordinary—very ordinary—English costumes, and they did not appear to have been outfitted by fashionable tailors.—European Mail.

An Interesting Discovery in Aix-La-Cha-pelle.

During the operations consequent on the undertaking of the restoration of the Cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle, the foundation stone was accidentally lighted upon and upon lifting this a chest was discovered, wherein the mosinteresting documents were found, which had been placed there on the foundation of the cathe dral or chapel of the Emperor Charlemagne According to this, it appears with certainty that the name of Aachen (the German nam-tor Aix-la-Chapelle) is of pure German origin and not, as has hitherto been credited, derived from the Roman wan, or even from the Roman name Auisgranum. In this document it is precisely stated: "This place shall be called Aschen." At the same place shall be called Aschen. At the same dime, the history, written on parchment and in monks' letters, is related in the following man-ner: In the year of our Lord 768, the heir ap-parent to the French throne; the son of Charlemagne, who was but three year-of age, suddenly vanished from the courtyard of the then hunting castle where he had been of age, suddenly vanished from the courtyard of the then hunting castle, where he had been playing. After the child had been sought for in vain within the walls, the King sent himen in all directions through the forests, built to no purpose. The servants of the King returned one after another without having found any trace of the child The sorrow of the parents, as well as of the whole of the courtiers, was very great, since the child seemed to be irrevocably lost. As, however, the last troop of searchers made however, the last troop of searchers made heir way through a thicket in the depth of he forest and came to a clear place, they disovered infallible traces of a human being (in the original the expression is somewhat more drastic). "Hallo!" cried the searchers, "here drastie). "Hallo!" cried the searchers, "herethe youngster must be." They thereupon cearched every bush and thickgit in the neighborhood, and "behold!" says the chronicle.
there under a wild rose bush lay the child in a sweet slumber." The happy finders now, half drunk with joy, hastened to the castle and laid the young Prince at the feet of the King. Highly rejoiced, he caused the wonderful manner of his finding to be related and then resolved to go on the next be related, and then resolved to go on the next day to the place where the rose-bush was and see the traces by which he was found for himself. Early next morning the Emperor, with a great number of knights and gentlemen, besides his counsellors, Alcuinius, Paulus, Diacorns and Equilard, proceeded to the place. They found the traces, and made a circle round them, in the middle of which stood the King. He then declared that he would build a chapel on this spot, and that it should forever bear the name of Aachen, in honor of this discovery. In order, however, that no part of this wonder might be forgot ten, the restored son, who hitherto had been called Carlmann, should bear the name of Pepin. He next allotted the rose-bush for the garden of the royal mother; but after his and his wife's demise his sons were to give it a consecrated place where it should grow and bloom through thousands of years. Hildesheim is the place where Louis the Pious, the only remaining Louis the Pious, the only remaining son, planted the rose on the foundation of the cathedral. Charlemagne invested Aacher (Aix-la-Chapelle) with extraordinary privi cathedral. Charlemagne invested Agenen (Aix-la-Chapelle) with extraordinary privi-leges. Its citizens were in the whole empire free from personal and military service, im-prisonment and tribute. Aix-la-Chapelle also possessed the right of asylum; its air made all possessed the right of asylum; its air made all men free, even those who were under the bau of the empire. All competent judges who have read this document are convinced of its genuineness.—Frankfort Correspondence Chicago Republican.

CITY NOTICES.

How to Look Young-Sixteen.-Don't paint or use vile Hair Restorers, but simply apply Hagan's Magnolia Balm upon your face, neck and hands and use Lyon's Kathairon upon your hair. The Balm makes your complexion pearly, soft and natural, and you can't tell what did it. It removes freekles, tan sallowness, ring-marks, moth-patches, etc.; and in plac of a red, rustic face, you have the marble purity of a of a red, rustic face, you have the marble purity of an exquisite belle. It gives to middle age the bloom of perpetual youth. Add these effects to a splendid head of hair produced by the Kathairon, and a lady has done her best in the way of adornment. Brothers will have no spinster sisters when these articles are around.

A NEW ENTERPRISE.—The intensely hot weather of the past few weeks has given rise to a new idea in domestic economy, i.e., that of bottling up the heat in self-sealing cans for winter use. This, it is claimed, would tend to mederante the temperature at the present time, and in view of the high rates which rule for coal would etherwise seem to be a desideratum. But we have no faith in the enterprise, and would advise our readers to supply themselves with good old-fashioned Anthracite, such as our friends, Mosrs. Mitcheal & Wroth, disponse at their popular depot, Northeast corner of Ninth and Girard avenue. They make a specialty of the Beaver Meadow Lehigh, which, for household use, has advantages over any other brand. Now is the time and this is the place to procure your supplies for the winter.

UNRIVALLED YET .- "Blood will tell!" say UNRIVALED 1 ET.—" Blood will tell!" say the horse fanciers, in estimating the endurance of a fine animal; and the motto is a good one, outside of the aporting world. A pure article—intrinsically good-must distance all competition, eventually. The success of UDOLPHO WOLFE'S Aromatic Schiedam Schapps had induced the manufacture of an hundred imitations; but in the nurivalled sate of his manufacture, while other have achieved, if at all, but a scanty success, may be found the public appreciation of a pure and wholesome beverage.

PHALON'S "VITALIA," for the hair, can be found everywhere. It is clear, and has no sediment. This wonderful preparation is PHALON'S VITALIA, or SALVATION FOR THE HAIR. Poured on the hands, it leaves no stain. It is, nevertheless, the most effective article of its cluss ever advertised. Sold by all druggists and fancy goods dealers.

A New Advertising Dodge.—Every time A NEW ADVERTISING DODGE.—Every times a lady who uses fragrant S OZOBONT opens her mouth, she advertises the article. The state of her teeth is a certificate of its excellence. No spot darkens their surtace, ao impurity clings to them, the cushions in which they are set are rosy, and the breath that swells through them is sweet as the breeze of June.
