as at the present moment.

—Among those who left Long Branch last evening was President Grant. He went direct to Washington. He wore a plain gray suit and shiny white hat. He was accompanied by Mr. Geo. W. Childs and the Architect Richard Dobbins. When the conductor came around for the fares the President had lost his ticket. The consequence was that he paid his fare. The conductor didn't know him. When properly posted, the conductor contritely re-funded the wrongly accepted money. The President will return to Long Branch to-morrow. On Monday he goes to St. Louis in a special car provided for him by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

QUARTER SESSIONS-Judge Paxson-After QUARTER SESSIONS—Judge Paxson—After the excitement attendant upon the trial of Baldy and Duncan, followed by the exemplary sentence, there was a marked lull in the fusiness of the Court this morning. With both-locks full of prisoners there was considerable ifficulty in getting a case before the jury. Absence of witnesses was the general complaint. Up to the hour our report closed, but it we cases had been tried.

James Lees was convicted of a charge of stealing brass.

Sarah Smith was convicted of a charge of saran Smith was convicted of a charge of arceny, under peculiar-circumstances. The defendant and the prosecutrix got into an altercation, and finally to blows, and in the course of the scuffle the prosecutrix dropped six dellars, which were picked up by the child of the defendant, and subsequently passed to her. When demanded, the possession was admitted but involving the part of the possession was admitted but involving the property of the child of the defendant, and subsequently passed to her.

her. When demanded, the possession was admitted, but inability to pay alleged. Charles Borme was put on trial charged with attempting to commit a forgery. It appeared that the accused purchased a quantity of liquors from Van Dyke & Co., giving in payment a fifty dollar note. He requested a portion of the change to be given in the form of a check for $20. Such a check was given. Later in the day the liquors were sent according to the direction of the defendant, but no party was found.

This raised the suspicion of Mr. Van Dyke and when, an hour afterwards, the defendant came to the store and represented that in a mistake he had partially destroyed the check and presented the remnant, which indicated that the paper had been burned, he asked for a new one. Mr. Van Dyke detected the smell of acid, and, detaining the accused, sent for a detective. It was then found that the defendant had been boarding at a hotel under an assumed name, and his room being searched, there was found a bottle of ink and a small tin cup which gave the odor of acid.
Upon the person of the accused was found a druggist's label "oxalic acid"; also a number of blank checks.

The defence in agreement set up by Mr. Pratt was that the Commonwealth had not shown that the defendant had ever attempted to forge a check, as the original check was returned in the mutilated condition described.

The case was not concluded when our report closed.

AN UNFORTUNATE WIDOW:

She was Swindled'by a Mormon Official.

[From the Missouri Republican.]
A pathetic story of disappointment and suffering was made known at the Police station yesterday. Louisa Loudermeer, a widow, with four little children, one of them sick, arrived by the late train at the Pacific Depot on Saturday night without any means or any friends. She made known her case to Officer Simms, who was on duty there. She was fur nished with a room at the depot during the night, and yesterday the facts of her case be-came known. It appeared that carly in the spring her husband, who was then alive, determined to remove with his family from Buchanan country, Virginia, where they then were, and emigrate West, choosing California as their future they then were, and their future choosing California as their future bome. It was arranged that they should be the five other families, who were go with seventy-five other families, who were also bent on going West, allured by the prospect of settling in a prosperous and rising state. Before the party were in motion Mr. Loudermeer died of disease of the heart. Mrs. Loudermeer was induced to undertake the journey with her neighbors, they promising to take care of her. She reached Salt Lake with her friends, when misfortune again over took her. She had lost her husband, now she was to lose her money. She was visited at Salt Lake by some person there who appeared to be an official. He told her it was the cus tom for strangers to give up their money to his custody, and it would be returned when it was required. She delivered up the money—rather foolishly and ignorantly no doubt—and never saw it again. She also found that the company of emigrants had moved on without her knowledge. Without money, her friends gone, and a lonely stranger, with none but her heipless children the wade up her mind to return tom for strangers to give up their money to children, she made up her mind to return to her father and mother, who are still living in Virginia. After encountering many ob-stacles, she succeeded in reaching St. Louis on her way home. As soon as her history was known, several kind hands were at work to assist her. A purse of $26 was made up for her on the cars; Officer Simms collected six or eight dollars, and, at the Central, Officer Keinhardt collected as many more. Captain Kohlund directed an officer to go with the woman to the Prescott House, and ascertain on what terms she could have board. The proprietor, with much generosity, refused to take anything in pay, and offered to board Mrs. Loudermeer and her children free until they were ready to leave. They left last uight for Virginia, one of the railway companies having agreed to convey the family to their destination for the sum of $15.

A Tarantula Story.

The Marysville (Cal.) Standard of July 25 says: "A few days since, while walking on the levee, we discovered a large tarantula also the levee, we discovered a large tarantula also taking an airing. Its size was unusual and we resolved upon its capture, but immediately upon touching it with our stick its size diminished one-half, and minute specks were seen running in every direction; these, upon examination, proved to be young tarantulas, and almost infinitesimally small. We counted over one hundred and fifty of them. We withdrew a few steps and they gradually recollected on the back of the old one, when she deliberately marched off. The query in our mind is, How did the old one know when they were all together ""

MME. RATAZZI AND PONSARD.

G. S., the Paris correspondent of Childs's Publisher's Circular, thus in his gossip-unites he names of Ponsard, Mme. Ratazzi, Engéne Sue, and Jules Janin; the revelation is in-such and Jules Janin; the revelation is instructive and curious:

M. Jules Janin has published an interesting article on the late M. Ponard, which reveals two circumstances of the poet's life which had great influence on him and paralyzed for years his talents. He became infattated with Princess Marie de Salms a daughter of Mr. Wissersen Marie de Salms, a daughter of Mr. Wyse, some-ime English Minister to Greece, by a Princess Bouaparte. She is now the wife of Signor Ratazzi, the eminent Italian statesman. She returned his love, and absorbed by his amout he neglected everything else. To gratify her extravugance he gambled. The passion grew on him and he spent all nights at the gaming able. At last she grew tired of him, discarded him, and granted her favors to another. He was wounded to the heart by this descrition. His friends were delighted by the rupture, his triends were dengined by the repeats, which rid him of two absorbing and feverish passions which blighted his intellect. His riends married him to a sweet girl. M. Menrice, one of them, gave him for two years his house on the sea-shore, where he eradicated love of gaming and devoted himself to literaure once more. It was there he wrote "Le Lion Amoureux," and many traces of the resentment borne Princess de Salms are to be discovered in it. In M. Jules Janin's article there is an excellent letter by Eugene Sue on gambling, and on M. Ponsard's passion for gaming. It was addressed to Princess de Salms; she is the "Marie" of the letter:

"He (Ponsard) had lost everything like selfconsciousness. He had a fever, that horrible fever of gaming, which distracts, which maddens one. He had lost all consciousness of you, of his mother, of his genius and of his He was a madman, aud compassion should be felt for madmen; they should be taken care of, calmed, cured, and above all things there should be kept out of their sight everything which might awaken their passion. This is the reason why our friend should fly temptation; ah! temptation. temptation, fittal spectre, infamous pimp! I am distressed, Marie, because, I repeat to you, I affirm to you, our friend suffers as a noble-hearted man must suffer, whose remorse, whose self-reproaches must be terrible; but I beseech you, for heaven's sake, do not give up, do not despair; twould discourage him, On the contrary, you should tell him the truth namely, that he has scarcely begun to produce all that his friends have a right to expect from his genius; that he is a man of firm character: that there is no invincible passion; that the sense of duty (which he has more than any body when he is in his normal condition) triumphs over these follies when one wills it firmly; and that he will find the noblest, the gentlest, the most maternal and the most pro-lific of all expiations in labor. Mon Dieu, how much I do wish I were able, God is my witness, to give him some of the invincible obstinacy I have for work, and to which I have owed and do owe so many consolations. It so happened, when we rode out together, he driving your carriage, we talked on this subject. He expressed his astonishment at my constant labor, at my solitary life, and I said to him: 'Try to imitate my example. Resolve to give a certain hour every day to labor; inspiration will not come every day to you, poet as you are, but strive to wait for it, and you will find occupation.' In talking of gaming, I said to him: 'Have you not the most admirable, the noblest, the most absorbing, and the most exciting gambling when you stake so much against the public the first night of one of your pieces? Do you seek emotions, or gain? Where will you find livelier or more violent emotions, or a more favorable chance of gain? What can you lose? Some months of toil, 'tis true, but to great poets as to great warriors, defeats themselves are not sterile, but full of instruction."

CITY NOTICES.

THE PRETTIEST WOMAN IN NEW YORK, Miss K—, well-known in our fashionable society for her distingue appearance and beautiful complexion, was once a sallow, rough skinned girl. Chagrined at her red, freckled face she pitched into Hagan's Magnolia Balm, and is now as pretty in complexion as she is charming in manners. This article overcomes freckles, tan, sallowness, moth patches, ring-marks, etc., and makes one lock ten years younger than they are. Magnolia Balm for a transparent complexion, and Lyon Kathairon to make the hair plentiful, luxuriant, soft and delicate, have no rivals. The Kathairon prevents the hair from turning gray, eradicates dandruff, and is the best and cheapest dressing in the world.

It has been clearly demonstrated that all Liquors dis tilled by the ordinary methods contain a very large per centage of impurities; the degree of heat that must ne-cessarily be employed, decomposing, disengaging and vaporizing all the baneful elements and noxious gase contained in the much, which when conducted form the leleterious fusel oil so detrimental to life and health. Consequently Liquors, as ordinarily distilled, are upt. even when only used sparingly as a stimulant, to create NAUSEA, SIOK HEADACHE, INFLAMMATION, and RIDNEY DISEASES; but, when indulged in to excess, the result is BRAIN FEVER, DELIRIUM TREMENS, APOPLEXY, INSANITY, &c. The "P. P." Whiskies, on the contrary, "stimulate and cheer" without unduly exciting the brain or injuring the coats of the stemach. They are refined from the choicest products of the Cereals in "YACCUC," the pressure of the atmosphere being reduced from: lbs. to 2 lbs. to the square inch; consequently a temperature of only about 90 degrees of heat is required in the operation.
