PENNSYLVANIA POLITICS.

There was a bitter fight over the election of Congressional Conferees at the York County (Penn.) Democratic Convention on the 9th. The XVth Congressional District is composed of York, Cumberland and Perry counties. The Crawford county system of making nominations is in operation in Cumberland country, and at the election on Satur day last, John B. Brutton, editor of the Carlisle Volunteer, received the highest number of votes as candidate for Congress.

The Hon. B. J. Haldeman, the present Representative and C. E. Maglaughlin, District-Attorney, were also candidates. There were over 3:500 votes cast, of which Mr. Haldeman received less than one-third. The candidate Congressional Quarrels.

received less than one-third. The candidate having been conceded to Cumberland county, the friends of Mr. Brutton claim that York county was bound to recognize the fact. This, however, the Convention of yesterday, after a desperate contest, refused to do. Perry county has virtually endorsed the nomination of Haldeman, which will make him the of Haldeman.

regular" candidate.

The probabilities are that Mr. Brutton will run as an independent candidate, and should he do so he would no doubt be well sustained by the Democracy of Cumberland county. It is charged that Mr. Haldeman carried York is charged that Mr. Haldeman carried York county by the use of corrupt means. There is great bitterness over the action of the York County Convention, and a lively canvass is expected. Under the circumstances the Republicans may name a candidate. This district is Democratic by about 3,600 majority.

THE BED RIVER.

The British Expedition at Lake of the Woods.--Loyalty of "General" Riel.

The St. Paul Press of the 5th inst. says:
The advance of the British Red River forces was, at last accounts, at Lake of the Woods, and was slowly making its way to Fort Garry. Information has been received by Gen. Riel of the approach of the troops, and a perfect of the approach of the troops, and a perfect understanding seemed to exist between Col-Wolseley, the commander of the British expedition and Gen. Riel. Of the ninety miles of road which remained to be cut through the wilderness between Lake of the Woods and Winnipeg, nearly half had been accomplished by the troops, and Gen. Riel had sent out a force of his own men to assist in opening the way for the passage of the expeditionary forces. Col. Wolseley's representatives had reached Riel's headquarters, and with his sanction had issued the following proclamation, printed in circular form, at the and with his sanction and issued the following proclamation, printed in circular form, at the office of the Winnipeg New Nation, (in both—the French and English languages), and which also appeared in a conspicuous place in the columns of the New Nation of the 22d of July, copies of both of which have been kindly furnished us by Mr. Rappatune.

nished us by Mr. Bannatyne:
To the Loyal Inhabitants of Manitoba: Her Majesty's Government having determined upon stationing some troops amongst you, I have been instructed, by the Lieutenant General commanding in British North America. proceed to Fort Garry with the force under my command.

Our mission is one of peace, and the sole object of the expedition is to secure Her Majesty's sovereign authority. Courts of law, such as are common to every portion of Her Majesty's empire, will be duly established, and justice will be impartially administered to all races and to all classes—the loyal Indians or half-breeds being as dear to oval Indians or nan-breeds being as dear to our Queen as any other of her loyal subjects. The force which I have the honor of com-manding will enter your province represent-ing no party, either in religion or politics, and will afford equal protection to the lives and property of all races and of all creeds. The strictest order and discipline will be maintained, and private property will be care-maintained, and private property will be carefully respected. All supplies furnished by the inhabitants to the troops will be duly paid for. Should any one consider himself injured by any individual attached to the force, his grievance shall be promptly inquired into.

All loyal people are earnestly invited to aid me in carrying out the above-mentioned objects.

s. G. J. Wolseley, Colonel Commanding Red River Force. Gen. Riel's proclamation announcing to the people of the Red River Settlement that their political difficulties had been amicably settled. and that all the rights they had claimed, and were willing to fight for, had been generously granted by the British Government, has not come to hand, but we are assured that the most satisfactory state of feeling prevails among the people; that Riel is regarded with unabated love and gratitude by all classes, and that he is stronger to-day in the affections of his people than ever be-fore. Gen. Riel has succeeded in preserving the rights and liberties of the Red River the rights and liberties of the Red River people, and if these rights and hiberties are endangered in the future, Gen. Riel will be just as ready to take up his sword in their defence as he has been in securing them for the present; and thousands of men who look upon him as their leader will be just as willing to follow him then as they have been in the to follow him then as they have been in the past. General tranquillity had for weeks been prevailing in the settlement; business was brightening up, and everything was beginning to assume the same shape that existed before the attempt was made to pass this people over to the Canadians. Gen. Riel was still conducting the affairs of the Provisional Government of the Rieses conducting the affairs of the Fiovisional Cornment in a satisfactory manner to all classes, and was only awaiting the arrival Wolseley to see the new Government of Manitoba thoroughly organized, when he would peaceably surrender his sceptre to the British Government. The Indians, since they were ampered with last winter by McDougall, Denis and Schultz, have become troublesome f not dangerous to those on the remote outskirts of the settlement. Promises had been held out to them by the Canadians, which, of course, had never been fulfilled.

POE'S "BAVEN."

The Absurd Story of Shaver, of Burling-ton.

The following is addressed to the New York

The following is addressed to the New York Evening Post:
I observe that Rev. J. Shaver, of Burlington, New Jersey, writes that he has found a letter of Edgar A. Poe, in which Poe credits the authorship of "The Raven" to his friend Samuel Formula, who that the Poet for myblington Fenwick, who sent it to Poe for publication. wishing him, before printing, to "see if it had merit," and make any alterations that might appear necessary. Not only this, but it seems that Mr. Fenwick deprecated his own talents that Mr. Fenwick depreciated his own talents so far as to suggest that, in that instance, or in any future pieces he might contribute, "I". Poe) "should revise and print them in my own name to ensure their circulation."

At the time of the publication of "The Raven" in the American Review, I was a frequent visitor at the office of Mr. Cofton, the editor, and often assisted in examining manuscript, and in this way chanced to be present when Poe brought in "The Raven." Mapother, the clerk, told me who he was, and asked if he had better give him some money—I think twenty-five dollars. I glanced at the poem and told him to pay it, feeling ure that Colton would approve. I conversed with Poe for some time, and subsequently saw him once or twice, along with Colton.

while that number of the magazine was passing through the press, and am sure that on all these occasions he was perfectly sober.

If he did pass off another man's work as as own, it was with a perfect consciousness of what he was doing.

If afterwards he was disposed to give credit

If alterwards he was disposed to give credit to the real author, there was no need of excusing himself by a plea of intoxication. His triend Fenwick's singular request would have been explanation enough to accompany an announcement of the authorship to the public. And why did he not announce it to the public instead of writing it in a private letter. nstead of writing it in a private letter to Mr Dickerson? That gentleman could hardly have credite:

That gentleman could hardly have credited the story, for he has made no use of the information, which seems unaccountable.

Finally, when we consider "The Raven" is a peculiarly Poe ish production—a poem hows abundantly competent to write, while we know nothing in Mr. Fenwick's career which would indicate that he might be the author—the conclusion is irresistible that this letter is either a forgery, one of those ingenious canards to make a sensation which have been so common of late years, or else one of those crazy whims which Edgar A, sometimes installed.

I feel no special interest in vindicating the name and reputation of Poe, except such as arises from the indignation which every man feels on seeing a dead author robbed of his laurels by bold assertion or pretended revelations.

J. B. VARNUM.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., August 8, 1870.

THE NATHAN MURDER.

A Suspected Witness. At the coroner's inquest in the case of the Nathan murder, the housekeeper's son, William Kelly, was the most important witness examined yesterday. The World has the fellowing about this man:

William Kelly, the Housekeeper's Son. Next came the examination of William Kelly, the housekeeper's son, which was extended until it was time to adjourn for the day. Thus far not the slightest evidence has been found against him, except that he was a lodger under Mr. Nathan's roof on the night of the murder. And still he is more than suspected, and his examination yesterday could not have been more severe if he had been on tripler the murder. At one time it seemed as if he was on trial to answer the charge of hounty-jumping. At another it seemed as if he was being tried for larceny or some other crime for which he had been secretly indicted.

The young man went on the stand to face scores of men whom he knew were more than suspicious of him, and he had not the first suspicious of him, and he had not the first friend in the room, not even his humble mother. At the first call of his name every neck was strained, every eye distended. The spectators in the farthest corner of the court-room clambered up on the backs of the benches, and the officers were too intent-out the witness themselves to notice the disorder. benches, and the officers were too intent outhe witness themselves to notice the disorder at their backs. Right over the shoulder of the witness six keen eyes belonging to detective officers were peering down upon him, and every word he spoke was eagerly drank in, and every move of his muscles watched. The tone of the Coroner was such that every question seemed to imply a threat. And while the Coroner was interrogating the witness, and the witness to imply a threat. And while the Coroner was interrogating the witness, and the witness was responding in a straightforward manner, Kelly was startled by the fierce remark of a juror, who got up on the other side and yelled in the ear of the witness: "Mr. Kelly, you'll have to speak louder; the jury insist upon it." Whereupon the witness turns and addresses his replies to the jury for awhile until he is gradually drawn to the other side by the Coroner and District Attorney.

gradually drawn to the other side by the Coroner and District-Attorney.

Kelly's Appearance.

This man has also had the pleasure of seeing himself described in the papers as a "stupid, half-faliotic fellow," a "suspicious character," "bounty jumper," &c. His examiner exerted to fasten a single "bounty jumper," &c. His examiner exerted every effort yesterday to fasten a single offence on him and failed. As for his being idiotic, he is quite the reverse. Some of the questions put to the witness in relation to his father, his birth, &c., were characterized by many who heard them as being unnecessary and cruel, his interrogators knowing of the great misfortune the witness endures, but not owing to any fault or crime of his own. Kelly is twenty-four years of age, and is by no means a robust man. He is slender and pale, and his appearance denotes the most regular habits. His hair was neatly cut and combed; his face shaved clean, except his and combed; his face shaved clean, except his and comeed; his face shaved crean, except his upper lip, where he wears a mustache; and his collar, a standing one, was scrupulously white and close fitting. His clothing was necessarily plain, but notwithstanding he had worn the same suit all summer, it was entirely whole and clean. He has a high-and well-shaped head and his fore-head is quite prominent, while the cheeks are hollow, giving his eyes a sunken appearance. To one question put by the Assistant District Attorney, in relation to a subject which by no earthly means could affect this case, and a question mortifying in the last degree for the witness to answer. Kelly turned and faced his interrogator Kelly turned and faced his interrogator, firmly saying he would not answer the question. His steady look was met with a gaze more stern, and the words: "You will answer sir; you answer all questions here." The question was then answered, and no further resistance was offered. It is doubtful if there was a fair-minded spectator in the crowd who did not have some, if not all, of his suspicions removed by the time the witness left the stand
