The Prussians holding Nancy, threatened its right flank, and had pierced its centre at Pont-à-Mousson. MacMahon, on the right, had fallen back to the town of Toul, and it was absolutely necessary that the French, outgeneraled as they were, should form a new line with Mac-Mahon's position for its right. It will probably be found that a retreat was being executed for this purpose when the Prussian attack was Navy Appropriation bill, the Navy Department fear from his own excitable and excited people Survey in reduced y hap which made this subsequent disaster possible. The defeat sustained in this contest ] may ensure the retreat of the French to a line further back than the Meuse, but we shall probably find that they will take up a position upon that river; leaving Metz to a garrison, and defending Toul to the last extremity.

The effect of this triumph of the Prussians and of the continued retreat of the French, cannot fail to have a demoralizing effect upon the French army and upon the people of Paris, when the whole truth is known. There is something sublime and overwhelming in the magnificent, irresistible progress of the Prossian army, even to us who regard this conflict merely as calm, disinterested spectators, We can readily imagine then what must be the effect upon the beaten army of France, which has known nothing but disaster in the presence. of this splendid foe, and upon the people of Paris, who perceive these hosts sweeping onward without a check to their city. [By the American Press Association.] THE WAR.

A Doubtful Rumor LONDON, Aug. 16, A. M .- The Daily News in its issue of this morning, contains a des patch from its correspondent at the neutral city of Luxemburg, which says : "A great battle was fought yesterday. The whole line of the German army was defeated." The correspondent adds, however, that though this information has been received at Luxemburg through a somewhat creditable source, it lacks confirmation. No later advices have been telegraphed relating to the affair.

A Reconnoissance. PARIS, August 16 .- Despatches received here state that a detached body of Prussian cavalry are scouring the country west of Nancy. Yesterday a battalion of German Uhlans were seen by some citizens of Com mercy, near that place.

The Prefect of the Meuse has ordered the rails of the connecting lines within his department to be torn up, to impede the march of the Prussians.
