On arriving at the foot of the bill they were forced to take off their skies; or snow-shoes; and, having scrambled half-way up, they at last came to a large hole, where their dogs com-menced growling and barking furiously. The brothers, imagining that the cavern might pos-sibly hold a bear, had a short consultation

LEGAL NUTRELS, AND A COURT OF THE U N THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE U Vep. Ex. Feb. TABO ND 64: 1863. UNITED STATES V. JOHN HAGGABTY, ARTHUR P. DREW AND BERNARD QUIGLEY. The Commissioner appointed to distribute the fund in court arising from the Mermal's Sale, under the above, writ of the following described property of Bernard Quigley, to wit: rushed one brother on his skies at the rate of twenty miles an hour, while the other, having first barred the entrance of the hole with logs of wood, quietly cocked his gun and resigned himself to wait for anything that might turn up: Our young sportsman was not left long in suspense. Be-fore many minutes had elapsed he began to feel the ground beneath him shake like an earthquake, and suddenly his astonished eyes beheld four bears rush out within a few yards of where he was standing. The bears charged at once, but the milled over the little Lap-was too quick for them. With his single barrel, loaded with shurs he rolled over the little that the fourth ward of the sing of fact of a context of a street wide alleys. But he same premises which the bound here the was standing that his single barrel, loaded at once, but the nimble barrel, loaded uick for them. With his single barrel, loaded with slugs, he rolled over the first, then took to his heels, or rather his snow-shoes, and was out of their reach in no time. The bears fol-lowed for some distance, but, finding the snow getting too deep for them, and their prey escaping, they gave up the pursuit, and turning sharp round, made for a neighboring lake, where they probably knew the snow to be a bear, animultion being scarce. It was da-cided that Paul should stand still, and his three companions endeavor to drive the bears toward him. The plan succeeded admirably; the bears were driven within a few yards of Paul, who knocked one over. The stratagem was_repeated, and another bear fell. to his gun. Night now coming on, it-was settled that it would be more prudent to return to their village and follow up the remaining bear on the uext morning. At daybreak the four Laps were again ou, the snow, and not long was it before Master Bruin was found snugly rolled up, in a spot where the snow had been cleared away by the rein-deer. Off went the bear, and away went the share of the spot of the strate of the spot the bear. Network the four the bear, and away went the sharing full cry. The following account of a bear hunt; ex tracted from a Norwegian paper, the Morgen-blad, may be interesting to those who have done snow shoe hunting either in Canada or elsewhere. The Norwegian "skie" (pro-nouced "shee"), differs from the Canadian snow-shoe, being made of wood, one-quarter of an inch thick, three and a half inches broad and nine feet long, with turned-up toes like Turkish shoes. The Laps are in the habit of sharp round, made for a neighboring lake, where they probably knew the snow to be less deep. The intrepid little Lap, how-ever, was not quite so ready to give up the fun, so he in his turn gave chase, and soon overhauled the three remaining bears. Keeping at a respectable distance, he com-menced pelting them with snowballs, and dex-terously enticed them into deeper snow. In the meantime the brother - returned, bringing with him assistance in the shape of two active with him assistance in
