But when Brother Stevenson corresponded with him about coming out to the Valley, he replied that the spirit testified to him that he should come there, and in every letter that he afterward received from him he expressed a still stronger desire to come. Brother Stevenson made a collection, and after raising sufficient means, went to Kirkland and brought him on.

Martin Harris is in his 88th year. He is remarkably vigorous for one of his years, and the unfortunate hox of the Prussian spy mania thang they are now still retains the use of his faculties, his memory being good, and his sight, though his eyes appear to have failed, being so acute that he can see to pick a pin off the ground. This afternoon M. Favre made explanation of the terms which Bismarck proffered on behalf of the Prussian Government, and which he (Favre) indignantly rejected on account of their arrogance. M. De Bismarck's demands parties have united to sustain with energy the government, of defence. Should you hear are as follows;

First.—That France should concede an armistice.

Second.—That France should surrender the second.—That France should surrender the enormous force of National and Mobile Guards. fortresses of Strasbourg, upon the Rhine, and Toul and Verdun, upon the Moselle, thereby giving to the Germans the advantage of free France make a heroic effort."

giving to the Germaas the advantage of free transportation of provisions of war by the great routes through France.

M. Favre immediately, and without reservation, rejected these proposals, so derogatory to the honor of France. He refused to treat upon such terms, even with modifications. As second officer of the Republic he could accept no terms involving the loss of territory. He would accept the involving the loss of territory. He would accept the involving the loss of territory. He would accept the involving the loss of territory. The rumor of the approach of the Prussians to Orleans, created the greatest terror. The would accept the inevitable consequences of a to Orleans created the greatest terror. The refusal rather than France should suffer by a railway service was stopped when there was loss of honor and self-esteem.

The interview then terminated with mutual expressions of feeling upon the part of the negotiators.

M. Favre was courteously treated, and was the support of the part of the negotiators.
