"Immediately upon perceiving this retrograde movement, the Fifth German Corps took the oflensive vigoronsly, following their retreating enemy.
"As a result of the straggle, we have, first, the failure of the French to attain their object, and next the increased ability of the Prussians to construct the works. The German loss is roughly estimated at between four and five hundred. The loss of the French in killed and wounded cannot be ascertained, owing to the fact that most of the wounded were carried off during the battle. The Prussians, however, captured over four hundred prisoners. Every derived over four hundred prisoners. Every derived over four hundred of the other works of the wounded were carried off during the battle. The Prussians, however, captured over four hundred prisoners. Every day adds to the strength of the German posi-tion around Parls." The Duke of Nassau was killed on Sept. 24, while riding with the King of Prussia and staff from Rheims to Chalons, for the purpose of conferring with Prince Frederick Charles. In the thickest part of the woods there suddenly rang out a double volley of muskery from an ambuscade of sharpshooters. The third car-riage, containing the Duke and staff, was rid-dled with bullets, and one aide-de-camp was instantly killed, another mortally wounded, and the Duke badly wounded. The fifth car-riage, containing the King, was struck by several bullets, but no one was hit. The woods hand. M. Tissander, the veronaut, has already ar-rived at Tours from Paris. He publishes in we neared Guernsey the picture became less ney. Here the deep-marked cluts were magni-fied to an apparent hight of many hundred feet, and no scene painter devising a grand transformation scene ever dreamt of more corporations and individuals.
