Thursday, October 6, 1870. THE PEACE SOCIETY. Everybody admits that the doctrines ar principles of the Peace Society, which is again ressing its claims upon the public, are excelent; and if such a thing were possible every honest man and woman would hail with delight he sincere conversion of mankind to the The Republicans have nominated John Society's theories. But while the human race | Lamon. But what does the Peace Society offer as a substitute? Nothing. It merely entreats the world to refrain from fighting, and if all the world consented there would be no trouble But if half the people of the world joined the Society, the Society could only ask them to accept with humility the kicks and cuffs which would assuredly be given to them. As long as men are assailed they must defend themselves. When the rebels tried to overthrow this Union we had either o submit to destruction of everything that made life worth having, or fight. Of the wo evils, destruction or war, the latter was by far the more preferable; and so when Prussia was attacked by Napoleon she could not help fighting, even if she had desired peace most earnestly. The instinct of self-preservation is stronger than faith in the loveliest peace theories; and this will always inspire nations and individuals to forcible resistance until a system of defence more effective than fighting answered through the public papers, then some discovered. Even a member of the Peace one has blundered—or worse. Society would fight with a rufflan who tried to ob and kill him. war; at present, no matter how much we dislike fighting we are compelled to it, and the only thing we can do to show our approval of the excellent sentiments of the Peace Society is to punish as severely as possible the individuals who make conflict necessary. ..... EUROPEAN AND AMERICAN SOL-During the suspense that marks the present position of the hostile armies in France, there is little offered for speculation as to the probable course of events; although every one is expecting to hear before long that Paris has succumbed. At such a time the views of intelligent American observers of the French and German armies may be referred to, espe cially when they make comparisons of them with our own armies during the rebellion Lieutenant-General Sheridan, who has been at the Prussian Headquarters during the whole time of active operations, is reported to have written that while the military organization of the Germans is superior to that of the French and while the men are also of better physique, neither French or Germans are the equals of Which we warrant superior to any other Flour in this market. This judgment of one of our most distin guished soldiers is corroborated by the opinions of various intelligent Americans who have been in France and Germany since the war began who saw the Prussians advancing to the Rhine who saw French regiment after regiment leav ing. Paris amid the cheers of the populace; who observed the bearing and the training of both armies: who witnessed the trains of wounder borne back from the battle-fields, and had op portunities of watching the preparations made for treating the sufferers. A distinguished physician of Philadelphia, just returned from Curope, saw all these things, and his view exactly conform to those of Sheridan. But in addition, he says that neither Germany or France has any such provision for the care of the wounded as the United States had during the rebellion. In fact, the best arrangements made by either power are but imperfect imita tions of the American Sanitary and Hospital

Count Bismarck on Republicanism in Europe.

The London Daily Telegraph contains a communication from Meanx, giving a synopsis of the remarks made by Count Bismarck to Mr. Malet, the British Secretary of the Legation at Paris. After declaring his well-known views on the possession of Strasbourg and Metz, Count Bismarck said:

What I most fear is the effect of a Re-iblic in France upon Germany itself. That public in France upon Germany itself. That is what the King and I most fear; for no one General Burnside Teports that he delivered despatches to the American Legation, and was cordially received by Minister Washburne, who is firmly resolved to brave the licket headed by Gratz Brown. During an that the king and I most lear to no no be all knows so well as we do what has been the influence of American Republicanism on Germany. If the French fight us with a propagation of the regular Republicant ticket headed by Gratz Brown. During an than they can do us by force of arms.
