HUMOROUS ITEMS.

PAT AND THE MAGISTRATE.—"Please your lordship's honor and glory," replied Tom. "I shot the hare by accident."
"By accident?" remarked Captain O'Halloran.
"I was firing at a bush and the baste ran across my aim, all on his own accord."
"The gamekeeper tells a different story," replied his lordship.
"Och! don't put faith in what that man says," said Tom Ryan, "when he never cares about spakin' the truth anyhow. He told me t'other day yer lordship was not so fit to fill the seat of justice as a jackass!"
"Ay! ay!" exclaimed Viscount Kilkiddy, "indeed! and what did you say?"
"Praise yer lordship, I said yer lordship was!"

In a school examination a lady, appealed to the self-consciousness of the children, and tried to teach them a little about their senses. They knew that they saw and heard, but it was a revelation to them that they saw with their eyes and heard with their ears. So the lady said to them:
"You have noses; what are they for?"
There was a dead silence, but at last one adventurous urchin replied:
"Please ma'am—to be wiped."

A new paper in Boise City, Idaho, introduces itself to the public in the following terms:
"Salutatory: We have started a paper. Name: Capital Chronicle. Principles: Democratic to the hilt. Object: To make a living. Office: On Main street, about three hundred yards below the Overland Hotel, opposite an old oyster can in the road. And we'll run it or bust."

A Western Stump Orator, in the course of one of his speeches, remarked:
"If the Parsyfic ocean war an instkad, gentlemen, and the hull clouded canopy of heaven and the level ground of our yearth wor a sheet av paper, I couldn't begin to write my love of country on it!"
Perhaps he couldn't write at all.

A young lady from a boarding-school having made some progress in acquiring Italian, addressed a few words to an organ-grinder in her purest accent, but was astonished at receiving the following response—
"I no speak Inglis."

"I think I have seen you before, sir," said one gentleman to another.—
"Are you not Owen Smith?"
"Oh yes," replied the other, "I'm owin' Smith, and owin' Jones, and owin' Brown, and owin' everybody."

A Husband advertises thus—
"My wife Maria has strayed or been stolen. Whoever returns her will get his head broke. As to trusting her, anybody can do so if they see fit; for as I never pay my own debts, it's not likely I'll pay her'n."

A dancer once, said to Socrates,
"You cannot stand on one leg as long as I can."
"True," replied the philosopher, "but a goose can."

A little girl who was sent out to hunt eggs, thought it strange that she did not find any, as there were several hens "standing around doing nothing."

A young lady being recommended exercise for her health, said:
"I am willing to jump at any offer and run the risk."

"Pat what are you digging that hole for?"
"It's not the hole, sir, it's the dirt I'm digging."

"Sambo, did you ever see the Catskill Mountains?" "No, sah; but I've seen um kill mice."

"Poor, dear man," said a woman at the funeral of her fourth husband, "he's past trouble now."

Some strong-minded women denounce matrimony, because they say there is some thing childish in it.

When are culprits like old books? When bound over.

The glass that neither cheers nor inebriates—The looking-glass.

A man who knows how to keep a hotel—The man who is a host in himself.
