HUMOROUS ITEMS.

There is a young lady in town so modest that she had a young man turned out of doors for saying that the wind had shifted.

"My dear doctor," said a lady, "I suffer a great deal with my eyes." "Be patient, madam," he replied; "you would probably suffer a great deal more without them."

"My son," said a man of doubtful morals, putting his hand on the head of a young urchin, "I believe Satan has got hold of you." "I believe so too," said the urchin replied.

A smart Yankee old lady being called into court as witness, grew impatient at the questions put to her, and told the judge that she would quit the stand, for he was "really one of the most inquisitive old gentlemen she ever see."

"Nature has written honest man" on his face," said a man to Jerrold, speaking of a person in whom Jerrold's faith was not altogether blind.
"Humph!" Jerrold replied. "then the pen must have been a very bad one."

"Talken' of law," says Pompey, "reminds me of what the 'mortal Cato, who lib most a thousan' years ago, once said—de law is like a groun' glass winder, that gives light en uff to light us poor eron' mortals in de dark passage of life, but it puzzle de debble himself to see troo it."

A pompous individual walked up to the bar of the sea-side hotel, and with considerable flourish, signed the book, and exclaimed:
"I'm lieutenant-governor of——"
"That don't make any difference," says the landlord, "you will be treated just as well as the others."

"Papa," said Tommy, the other day, "is it a sin to change one's mind?"
"Well, no, my boy; why do you ask?"
"O, you know," replied the five-year-old, "I was to be a doctor."
"O yes, I remember," said his father; "what then?"
"Well, if you please, I think now that I'd rather be a candy-store!"

"Look out there, what are you kicking my dog for?"
"I'm kicking him 'cause he's full of fleas, and I don't want to get 'em on my good clothes."
"Fleas, the dickens! Why, that dog sleeps with me!"
"I know it, and that's were he gets them."

"Twas in the lovely month of June, I courted Lizzie Lee; she created wavelits murmured, and the moonbeams kissed the sea; I whispered in her ear soft words, her hands in mine I prest; and, as I drew her nearer still—well, never mind the rest! We wandered slowly, hand in hand, with heads together bowed: our words were low and softly said our sighs were long and loud; I asked her if she loved me, and her head drooped on my breast, I listened and the answer was—well, never mind the rest! The evening deepened into night, and stars lit up the sky; again I whisdered, and again her answer was, a sigh. At that fair shrine I humbly kuelt, my hope and love confessed; I was absolved; a day was named—and, never mind the rest! The happy moments passed away, the time at length arrived; my bliss was so ecstatic, 'tis a wonder I survived. Of course she was with lace enrobred, with orange blossoms drest: and in a copy—, you'll surely find the rest!"

Didn't Enjoy Herself as Usual.
As an original expression of heavy grief we doubt if anything more touching has been read than the following of a crushed heart, in Star City, Nevada.
Mrs.—"of that place, an eccentric old lady recently rushed into the room of a relative, and without waiting for the usual salutation, said:
"Well! John's dead!"
"Dead! Is it possible?"
"Yes dead! Died last night! I want you all to come to the funeral. The Masons and Odd Fellows are going to turn out, and we shall have a beautiful time."
Death being of rare occurrence in the settlement, of course every body went to the funeral. Next day, somebody remarked to the old lady that there was a large turnout.
"Yes, indeed, there was," she replied, "but I didn't enjoy myself as well as I have at some funerals, the horses cut up so."
