HUMOROUS ITEMS.

A hen is not immortal, and yet her son never sets.
 The man who was bent on matrimony, straightened up afterwards.
 Poor pigs, they are doctored the wrong way round—first killed and cured afterwards.
 Some girls are like old muskets; they use a good deal of powder but wont "go off."
 What's the difference between a chilly man and a hot dog? One wears a coat and the other pants.
 An Irishman who was drinking the health of a Bishop, gave this toast: "May yer reverence live to ate the ould hen that crows over yer grave."
 A book-keeper in a leading mercantile house has been discharged on account of short-sightedness. He rubbed out with his nose what he wrote with his pen.
 In many country churches throughout the this country, the drought is having one very serious effect—the sermons are drier than ever.
 Why are temperance men a band of robbers? Because they rob the poor-house of its inmates, and crime of its victims.
 If I had four apples to divide equally between us three boys, how would I do it without cutting any? There would be two for you two, and two for me, too.
 What should farmers do for certain parts of the alphabet? Sow their P's, keep their U's warm, live their B's, shoot their J's, feed their N's, be Y's, and take their E's.
 A veteran related his exploits to a crowd of boys, and mentioned having been in five engagements. "That is nothing," broke in a little fellow, "my sister's been engaged eleven times."
 "Make way, gentleman," cried a fussy office holder to some people the other night at a meeting; "Make way, we are the representatives of the people!" "Make way yourself," replied a sturdy member of the throng, "we are the people themselves."
 A story is told of a jolly fellow, who resided in Chicago about four years, and while on an eastern visit was asked how he liked the water out west. "By George, Mr. Jones," said he after a few moments' reflection, "I never thought to try it."
 An Irishman decapitated a turtle, and afterwards was amusing himself by putting a stick into its mouth, which it bit with violence. A lady who saw the proceeding exclaimed, "Why, Patrick, I thought the turtle was dead." "So he is, madam, but the craythur's not sinnible of it."
 An exchange tells of a young couple who went to the city to celebrate the Fourth in style. Putting up at a hotel, they were served at dinner with ice cream for desert. Rusticus tasted the cool confection, rolled it from one side of his mouth to the other, and finally ejaculated, "Thunder and lightning! Mariar, that's the coldest puddin' I ever et."
 Jinks and an acquaintance were on the beach the other day, and heard the screaming and giggling of some young ladies who were preparing to bathe in the surf. Jinks' friend asked what occasioned so much noise in the bath-house. "Oh," replied Jinks, "its only belles peeling!"
 It would seem that the hot season extends to remote parts of the country, as a report comes from Iowa City that the catfish come out of the river and lie in the shade and fan themselves with their tails, while the dogfish flop out of the water and follow the ice-wagons all around the streets, trying to pick up a piece of ice. Either this is true, or Iowa has some of the lyingest editors in the world.
 During the trial of a case in Louisville last week, a witness persisted in testifying to what his wife told him. To this of course the attorney objected, and it was ruled out by the judge. He would proceed again to tell "shust how it vas," when the attorney would sing out, "How do you know that?" My wife told me," was the answer. This was repeated several times. Presently, the judge becoming unable to contain himself any longer, "Suppose your wife was to tell you that the heavens had fallen, what would you think?" "Vell den, I dinks dey vos down."
