HUMOROUS ITEMS.

"Ma, make Bob behave himself, every time I hit him with the hammer he hollers."

"It is no sign because a man makes a stir in a community, that he is a spoon."

"Why is a drunkard hesitating to sign the pledge like a skeptical Hindoo? Because he is in doubt whether to give up the worship of the jug or not."

"Boy," said Uncle Testy, "what are you hollering for when I go by?" "What are you going by for when I am hollering?" returned the boy.

Stiggins, the new married man, says his wife is a perfect rose. The only drawback in his happiness is that she blows out a "leettle" too often.

At a late revival meeting, an impulsive young convert prayed that God would bless the two young ladies between whom he had been sitting—especially the one on the right."

"Come, Bill, it's ten o'clock; I think we had better be going, for it's time honest folks were at home." "Well, yes," was the reply; "I must be off, but you needn't go on that account."

An Irishman on board a vessel when she was on the point of foundering being desired to come on deck, as she was going down, replied that he had no wish to "see himself drowned."

"Is it true that there is poetical inspiration in tea, coffee and such mild stimulants?" Certainly it is. There is the case of Edgar A. Poe, for instance. A little "t" would have made Edgar A. Post.

"Do you ever take anything?" asked Sharp of Snozzles. "Never, sir, except when I'm unwell, and then my weakness is cognac. Just now I'm troubled with hollowness, and I don't care if I do."

"It is a pleasant thing to reflect upon," says Dickens, "and furnishes a complete answer to those who contend for the gradual degeneration of the human species, that every baby born in the world is a finer one than the last."

A Milesian, born on the last day of the year, felicitates himself on his narrow escape from not being born at all. "Be jabbers," says he, "and if it had been the next day, what would have become of me?"

Never trust a secret with a married man who loves his wife, for he will tell her and she will tell her Aunt Hannah, and Aunt Hannah will impart it to her favorite preacher, and then the whole female sisterhood will be treated to it in broken doses for the next six months.

A little girl being sent to the store to purchase some dyestuff, and forgetting the name of the article, said to the clerk, "John, what do folks dye with?" "Die with? Why cholera, sometimes," replied John. "Well, I believe that's the name; I want three cents worth."

A clergyman, reading a chapter in the Bible for his congregation, found himself at the bottom of the page with the words, "And the Lord gave Noah a wife;" then turning over two pages instead of one, he continued, "and he pitched her within and without with pitch."

A Michigan bridegroom failed to appear at the appointed time, but sent a note, saying that he didn't feel well enough acquainted with her to marry. Her father went and gave him a formal introduction with his boot, and the performance went right on.

A down east paper says that persuasive and humbugging agents are about in that region selling lightning rods. One old lady told an agent that she had no fear of lightning, but she had always been afraid of thunder. "Just so," he replied, "we can meet your case exactly. The square rods are lightning rods, and the round ones are thunder rods."

"What's that?" asked Mrs. Partington, looking up at the column of the Place Vendome during her late visit to Paris. "The pillar of Napoleon," she was answered.

"Well, I never did!" she exclaimed: "and that's his pillow—he was a great man to use that! But it's more like a bolster. And it's made of iron I do believe. Ah! Isaac see what it is to be great. How hard his head must have rested on his ironical pillow!"

This is the way a couple of Muscatine sharpers served a greeny from the country; He stepped in a saloon for "su'thin warm." A couple of "dead beats" got up a sham quarrel, and requested him to hold their coats while they fought it out—intending, on reclaiming their coats, to accuse him of having "gone through" their pockets, and then "go through" him. They walked into each other like wild cats, when they happened to observe that the coat-holder was nowhere visible. There was some tall running and swearing done, but greeny has not returned to that vicinity since.
