ELLIOTTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 1, 1871. Great Excitement—Discovery of Coal in Spring Township.

Mr. Editor:—Sir, the coal excitement in this place is greater now than ever known. Wm. Loy, who commenced two weeks ago to sink a shaft for the purpose of hunting coal has already found something, which, if it be not real coal is so near it that the difference is but very little.

The shaft has been sunk only 35 feet, and Mr. Loy states that he is quite confident of getting coal, plenty at about 50 feet. He says that 21 years ago he has seen some of as genuine coal in this place, as he ever saw which had been found by digging iron ore. There a number of persons in Little Germany, who think they have coal, and are now engaged in forming a company to bore as soon as possible, I am not one of those who feel certain of coal in this place.

A great many persons in this county are now idle and complaining of the hard times. Nothing but a railroad to develop the mineral treasures will make times better.
