Admitted .- On Monday evening of last week, Chas. H. Smiley, Esq., was examined preparatory to being admitted to practice. The examination was passed in a very creditable manner, and on Tuesday he was admitted to the bar. We have no doubt Mr. Smiley will prove an able member of the legal fraternity.

Presbyterian Church.-The carpenter work on the inside of this building is now done and all that remains to complete it, is the painting. The audience chamber is the finest in the county. There are four rows of pews divided by a main aisle in the center, while an aisle passes along each wall. The outside ends of the outside rows of pews are thrown a little forward to enable the occupants the more easily to face the pulpit. The tops of the pews are oiled walnut. The room is very tastily finished and while it is well lighted by large windows, the light is softened by stained glass of a neat design. The only drawback to the general appearance is the desk at the pulpit, which is absurdly small for a large room. The work on the stair way and main room of the church has been done by Messrs Wm. Burn and John J. Craig and reflects. credit upon them as workmen.

The lower part of the building is divided into a lecture room and a Sunday School room the latter being very large and well furnished, this having been done at the expense of the school. It is to be hoped that the society will at once take means to liquidate the debt which now rests on the building, as an old debt is a great impediment to the worldly and spiritual prosperity of a Terrible Storm in Harrisburg. -- On Monday night of last week a terrific storm passed over parts of Dauphin county doing great damage. The State Journal gives a large list of damages done, from which we take following: At the State Capital hotel, the consternation created among the guests was terrible. Those lodging in the upper part of the new wing of the building were driven from their rooms by the flood of water pouring in the broken windows on the west side. The hail stones broke in every pane of glass on that side, in the upper part of the building. When the hurricane struck, it tore off the entire tin roof, and carried it bodily into the capitol park, a distance of over a hundred feet. The chimnies were carried away and tof the cornice of the building blown down. In the ladies' parlor quite a number of ladies and gentlemen were congregated. The falling bricks came down the chimest them and drove the park panic stricken into the hallway, where they remained in the utmost terror during the prevalence of the hurricane. One of the large water maples trees on the Walnut street front was blown down, which narrowly escaped striking the Gross House, opposite. The upper part of the State Capitol was flooded, and many of the guests suffered severely in the loss of clothing by water. After the storm crowds of persons visited the Capital Park and gazed with wonder upon the huge pile of tin that had been wafted thence from the building opposite. A portion of the roof of Brandt's Hall was blown off and many other buildings damaged. Many pieces of ice the size of a hen egg were picked up after the storm was over. The Niagara express, train from Baltimore was crossing the Cumberland Valley railroad bridge, at 10 35 p. m., with an engine attached and the frightful swaying to and fro of the coaches, with the roar and din of the elements, caused a panic among the passengers which pen cannot describe. All on board expected to be hurled into the Susquehanna-into eternity! An eye-witness describes it to have been awful-in the fullest sense of the

For the Bloomfield Times. A Wild Man In Perry County.

Rockville, Aug 8, 1872. Considerable excitement prevails among the different parties frequenting the moun-Harrisburg and directly opposite Rockville. Not long since John Quincy Adams of the latter place while at his leisure was in pursuit of berries and having wandered a considerable distance into the mountains became terribly alarmed at the appearance of a man supposed to be perfectly wild, andgoing about in a condition that according to description, would be sufficient to put to flight the boldest backwoodsman. At least the sight of the human monster was too much for "Quincy" who vacated the grounds with the speed of a flying Buffalo. He never venturing to cast a look behind but leaping the smaller bushes, dodging overhanging tree, losing his hat, and relieving himself of his bucket he very rapidly increased the distance twixt him and his starting point, with the dreaded terror a considerable way in the rear a bellowing out his wild yells of triumph, but losing ground in the pursuit. By the remarkably rapid and lengthy strides of the venerable "Quincy" (not the Quincy that formerly sat on the Presidential stool however) he soon found himself in sight of the cozy little village where in an elderly lady's mansion he might find relief, and as was necessary a camphor stimulant. He has not been to gather berries since, and no further developments of the mystery have been erations, (of which there are four employed in the place by the different R. R. Co's.) saw fit one day since to rusticate among the shady trees and "dispatch" any whortleberries that might fall in their way, and finding themselves a smart distance outside "calls" of their instruments when they were startled suddenly by some unusual

Sad Accident.-The Harrisburg "State Journal" of the 9th inst., says; Jacob Bern-heisel, son of Peter Bernheisel, (well known in this county,) was instantly killed at about half-past 2 o'clock yesterday morning, by being struck by engine No. 89, O. Krick-baum, engineer. The accident occurred in the vicinity of the Herr street crossing, under the following circumstances; Mr. Bernheisel, who was employed as brakeman on shifting engine No. 131, of the Pennsylvania railroad (and had been in the employ of the company over four years), was standing on the south track with lantern in hand waiting for the freight train to pass, evidently intending to get on the hind car. About this time the Erie Mail due at 2:30 a. m., approached him (unobserved, it is thought), when he was struck as above stated-the back part of his head receiving a severe fracture, besides a deep cut on the forehead, and a gash over one of his eyes. Mr. Krickbaum saw the man on the track a short distance before the engine, and he whistled "down brake." A train close behind the Erie mail-the Philadelphia express of the Pennsylvania railroad-however, obliged Mr. Krickbaum, to move on, in order to avoid a collision. Mr. Bernheisel was taken to his home on Cowden street, between Cumberland and Broad, where his widow resides. He leaves no

He was harrowing, and lifting up the harrow to clean it, the horse started which caused the harrow to fall from his hands, and one of the harrow teeth pene-trated through his foot. On the same day the mail train east knocked a heifer be-longing to Mr. Mingle off the track and killed her. Misfortunes never come single handed.
