Charcoal a Good Farm Medicine.

Nearly all sick horses and cows are made so in the first place by eating improper food or too much of it. As soon as the owner finds any of his animals sick, it is the common custom to begin dosing with medicine. "We musn't leave the animal to die; we must do something !" and so all manner of hurtful drugs and poisons are thrust down the throat-saltpetre, copperas, turpentine, etc., quite sufficient to make any well animal sick, or kill a sick one .-"You didn't give the poor thing enoughyou should have given it oftener-you can't expect your beast to get well if you don't do more for it !"

Our rule has always been to give nothing unless we know exactly what to do; and in the meantime attend to every exterior comfort practicable. If the weather is cold, place it in warm quarters, avoid all exposure, and attend to pure air and strict cleanliness. But there is one medicine that can never do harm, and is commonly beneficial. This is pulverized charcoal. As we have just remarked, nearly all sick animals become so by improper eating, in the first place. Nine cases out of ten the digestion is wrong. Charcoal is the most efficient and rapid corrective. It will cure in a majority of cases, if properly administered. An example of its use. The hired man came in with the intelligence that one of the finest cows was very sick, and a kind neighbor proposed the usual drugs and poisons. The owner being ill, and unable to examine the cow, concluded that the trouble came from some overheating, and ordered a teacupful of pulverized charcoal given in water. It was mixed, placed in a junk bottle, the head held upwards, and the water with its charcoal poured downwards. In five minutes improvement was visible, and in a few hours the animal was in the pasture quietly eating grass.

Another instance of equal success occurred with a young heifer which became badly bloated by eating green apples after a hard wind. The bloat was so severe that the sides were almost as hard as a barrel. The old remedy, saleratus, was tried for the purpose of correcting the acidity, But the attempt to put it down always caused coughing, and it did little good. Half a teacupful of fresh powdered charcoal was next given. In six hours all appearance of bloat had gone, and the heifer was well.

We disapprove of quackery, where without a precise knowledge of the disease, powerful remedies are given at random, indiscriminately. The objection to quackery cannot extend to the use of charcoal, for it can do no harm; and goes directly to the seat of the trouble in most sick animals, and if timely applied effects a cure .- Stock Journal.

Pickling Pork.

Some thirty years ago I lodged from Saturday till Monday with an inn-keeper in the country, who was also a farmer. On the table for Sunday dinner, there was a nice piece of pickled pork, boiled the day before. On tasting it, I thought it the most delicious I ever ate. I requested "mine host" to to give me his recipe for curing pork. He replied as follows:

"As soon as my hogs are dressed and cool enough to be cut, I pack the sides in a barrel or cask, with plenty of salt on all sides of each piece, and when my barrel is full I immediately roll it to my pump and pump in water until I can see the water cease to sink in the vessel, or to moisten the salt on top of the cask. I then lay a flat stone, as large as the vessel will receive, on the contents, so as to keep the pork always under the salt or pickle. I put it in my cellar, covered so as to exclude the flies, and there it remains until a piece is wanted. Care must be taken to keep the meat under the pickle, otherwise it will rust."

Here is the whole secret of making good pickled pork for family use. We have used the above method, and we want no better, easier and economical plan. It has often happened that when we wanted to put down new pork there remained some of the old in the bottom of the cask. In that case we poured off the pickle, took the undissolved salt, packed the fresh pork on top of the old, using the salt which had been the cask, with the addition of fresh salt if necessary, and then poured on the old pickle or water. In this way we have had pork for three or four years in the bottom of our pork barrel, and when used it was as free from rancidity as it was three weeks after it was put down. Indeed we seldom emptied our pork barrel, except when it wanted hooping. We believe that boiling pickle is useless, if not injurious. Pork ought not, if it can be prevented, to be frozen before it is put down.

The City Insurance Journals, with all their sneers at Mutual Companies, and continual cry of Fraud! ! &c., cannot muster any better Insurance material! Why don't the City Insurance papers tell the public that no Mutual Company broke or failed during the last ten years? Why don't they tell the public that more than half the Stock Companies started within the last ten years panies started within the last ten years have? It is a well-known fact that Mutual Companies cannot fail.
