

A Man Murdered and Skinned.

The citizens of Dover, Del., were excited last Wednesday by the discovery of the body of a murdered man with the head and feet missing, and the skin removed so as to make recognition impossible. At first it was supposed to be the body of Dr. West as it was in his office where it was found, but subsequent developments caused a suspicion to arise that he had committed the murder himself, that his wife could obtain $35,000 insurance he had on his life.

Dr. West delivered himself up on the evening of the 6th, and made a full confession before the Coroner, of which the following is the substance:

"On Monday morning, December 2, I was taking a bucket of water, in my room, in the morning Henry Turner, the deceased, came along, and said, Boss, I will carry that up for you. I told him I would carry it up, as I had some work for him to do, if he would do it. I took out my pocket-book and paid him 25 cents. He said, Boss, you seem to be pretty flush, then he said, won't you give me some money to get me a drink. I said I would if he would go down to the bar next door.

It was a short time after that I met him near Hoffecker & Stewart's store, on the corner talking with some colored men; I passed him and went on up to my room in Kirbin's building, I just got there and unlocked the room, when he came up; I went on up stairs ahead of him and unlocked the room door up stairs and went in ahead of him; I had taken my gas apparatus to pieces that day, intending to fasten a small sledge-hammer to the weights; the sledge-hammer was sitting just inside the door; the other weights were near the corner about 8 feet further on; one of the weights was a bolt or piece of an axle; it was about 3 feet long and about 1 1/2 inches in diameter; I just got over about where this bolt was sitting, when I turned and saw Turner with this sledge-hammer in his hand; soon as Turner saw that I saw him with the hammer, Turner says give me your pocket-book or I will kill you; I snatched up the bolt or piece of axle, and just as I did so he struck at me with the hammer: he struck me on top of my hat, denting the hat in, but did not touch my head, as I was stooping over; I then struck him with the bolt or piece of axle, intending to strike him on the head, but missed his head and struck him on the neck, I think below the ear. He fell, and I don't think he ever breathed after that; this was just about sunset, he fell over on his side; I then felt his pulse, and found that he was dead. I did not intend to kill him, but only intended to knock him down so that he would not kill me."

After killing the dailey, the doctor spent three days trying to remove traces of his crime by carrying away portions of the body, but found difficulty in disposing of them. Failing in this he skinned it and tried to set fire to the building, but the fire went out, and the doctor was afraid to return to renew it, as he had placed powder near the body.

His life was insured for $35,000, and by some it is supposed that he deliberately murdered the negro and set fire to the building in order to destroy the body and give out the impression that he himself had been killed by an explosion of the gas he was making; and by this means obtain through his wife the insurance on his life.

A Novel Liquor Decision.

The Iowa correspondent of the Chicago Journal says that in Des Moines there is a People's Temperance association, composed largely of reformed drunkards, who keep a vigilant eye on whisky selling. By the aid of this association a suit was brought in the district court by Mrs. Ann Priestly, in an action for damages in the sum of $5,000 against Joseph Hierb, for selling intoxicating liquors to her husband, thereby incapacitating him from attending to his business, and thus doing great damage to his family. A large number of witnesses were examined, and the case most stubbornly contested by six of the leading attorneys of the State, Judge Maxwell presiding. The Judge gave the various questions which arose during the trial careful attention, and his rulings were principally against the prosecution. The trial lasted nearly five days. At the close the Court gave the case to the jury with instructions. The jury, after three hours, returned a verdict for the plaintiff, and fixed the damages at $2,520; and costs of suit. The defence at once gave notice of a motion for a new trial.

It is the opinion among sound lawyers that the verdict will stick, and, if so, it is one of the most important cases tried in Iowa, and that it is so considered is apparent from the fact that from all parts of the State come inquiries respecting it. It will place every liquor seller in the State at the mercy of the family of those to whom he sells liquor. A sale of liquor once proven is enough to warrant actual and exemplary damages. It applies to persons who are engaged in the traffic, whether as maker, agent, clerk, barkeeper, or otherwise, and the result will be the abandonment of the business almost entirely in the State.
