The Inter-Ocean, of Chicago, says: Captain Hickey, of the South Division, received a dispatch from police headquarters night before last, ordering him to send an officer forthwith to Englewood to meet an incoming train. In compliance with the mandate from the superintendent the captain sent one of his men uninstructed except that he would there meet the conductor, who would direct him. When the officer arrived at Englewood he was told by the conductor that a gentleman on the train had been robbed of $55.

Who the perpetrator was he had no idea; but the nervous demeanor of one of the passengers who wore a Kossuth hat and a brigandish cloak, had excited his suspicions. When the train arrived at Chicago, among the passengers who debarked were two parties, one a sensibly-appearing, matronly woman of 30 and the person with Kossuth hat and cloak. The latter was the first to leave the train. With the assistance of this gallant the lady of 30 stepped to the platform, and the two in company walked to the Gault House, whither they were followed by the suspicious conductor.

When breakfast was almost over at the Gault House, yesterday morning, a police officer named Slayton appeared, and requested the parties to hurry up, as they were wanted at the Central Police Station. The officer took them before Superintendent of Police Washburn. When the door had been closed very softly, shutting in the two persons and the superintendent, and shutting out the officer, the occasion of the arrest was discovered. The Kossuth hat brigandish cloak did not cover a masculine head or a masculine figure. This disguise was quite perfect, but, on being accused of being of the female gender and of having donned men's attire, the prisoner admitted her sex and told her story.

She came from Massachusetts to enjoy a trip in no particular direction. When she started out, a week or two after Christmas, she had no intention of ending her travels in Chicago more than in any other locality; she would return home if she could. She left there, she said, of her own will, and thought she had a perfect right to do so. She had met with no trouble since her departure until now ; and she could not imagine how she got into her present "fix." She would be 17 years old next June. As to the cause of her leaving "down East" vague reference was made as to the existence of a stepmother.

As to love, or any other foolishness of that sort, it was perfectly preposterous. She was not susceptible, nor was she pursuing-like a Nemesis-anybody who had wronged her or her family. Her sisters she was rejoiced to state, were married, and her family was eminently respectable. To spare them mortification she desired her name should not be known. In her time she had been to "lots of places," among others "the Boston Museum and at Cape May." She was not afraid of any questions that were gentlemanly. If she was disguised in men's clothes it was nobody's business where she got them. She didn't steal them, at all events." Who the girl is is a mystery, but the object of her trip is evidently nothing else than a love of adventure, mainly due to too much stepmother. Superintendent Washburn Net didn't steal them, at all events." Who the girl is is a mystery, but the object of her trip is evidently nothing else than a love of adventure, mainly due to too much stepmother. Superintendent Washburn She didn't steal them, at all events." Who the girl is is a mystery, but the object of her trip is evidently nothing else than a love of adventure, mainly due to too much stepmother. Superintendent Washburn will telegraph to her family when he can ascertain who they are and where they live. He took the girl home with him last night.

A New County.

The Elmira Advertiser publishes the following: There is a project to divide the county of Tioga, Pa. It is stated that there are more than five thousand petitioners asking that the division be made. There seems to be a notion, entertained by the people of Tioga, that they want a Court House in that borough, to gain which, should the county be divided, they will creat first-class new county buildings, free of county charge. They use this as an argument for the division of the county, because they claim that new buildings must soon be put up, as those in Wellsboro are very shabby and if done at the expense of the county it will cost each voter twelve dollars and sixty-seven cents. If the county is divided, and the county seat located at Tioga, it will cost each voter-nothing. The county was taken from Lycoming in 1864, and contained about 88.000 inhabitants. It now has thirty-five thousand. It is thirty-one by thirty-six miles square and contains eleven hundred and eight square miles. It has nearly seventy-nine hundred votors. / It is certainly large enough to be cut in two, and if the majority of its inhabitants desire the amputation, the theory of the government of this country would lead one to hope that it be done.

128" A peculiar and fatal accident happened to a horse of the Meyer rubber Company, of Milltown, on the morning of the 17th inst. The driver was proceeding to Milltown with a load of coal drawn by a span of horses, when one of the span slipped on the ice, his hind feet parting, thereby splitting his body to the backbone .-This is one of the strangest accidents we ever heard of, and it caused the death of the horse inside of thirty minutes.
