HUMOROUS.

Not the Right Card. A Philadelphia druggist sent his clerk out to drum for sales of oil. He carried the card of the proprietor and the picture of his girl in his side pocket. He called upon a tradesman in Ferry Co., and tossed a card upon the counter, saying that he represented that establishment. The tradesman picked it up, gave it a steady look, and said it was a fine establishment, and was informed by the clerk that he represented it about three years, whereupon he remarked to the youth that he supposed he would soon be a partner. The youth said he should be pleased to sell him some coal oil, and that his establishment handled more oil than any other in Philadelphia. The tradesman took another look at the card and asked the boy if he wasn't mistaken. He blushing guessed he was as he returned his girl's picture to his pocket.

A good story is told of Judge Rice. About the commencement of the war he made a speech in North Alabama in which he said the Southern soldiers could whip the Yankees with pop guns. Since the war, he chanced to make another speech at the same place. A big double jointed fellow was present who heard and remembered the former speech, and being in admirable frame of mind, concluded to go for Sam. Rolling up his sleeves and putting his fist in the palm of his hand, he propounded the fearful question: "Sam Rice, didn't you make a speech here in 1861?" "I did," said Sam. "And didn't you say we could whip the Yankees with pop guns?" "Certainly I did, but the d—d rascals wouldn't fight us that way!"

In a certain German school a new German teacher had been procured. In his class were two boys, one named Wilkins, and the other Wilkinson. He asked one of the boys what his name was. He answered "Wilkins." He asked the other. He answered "Wilkinson." The teacher not hearing the last syllable, said: "Ah! Wilkins' brother?" "No," said Wilkinson "not Wilkins' brother, but Wilkinson."

Smith had quite a small nose, and was cross-eyed, while Jones had a very large nose. Meeting one day, Jones, after looking with a comical expression at Smith, remarked: "Lucky for you, Smith, that you're cross-eyed; for if you wasn't you could never see your nose." "Lucky for you, Jones," instantly replied Smith, "that you are not cross-eyed; for if you were you would never see anything but your nose."

Charles Lamb says, a speaker should not attempt to speak too much, but should leave something to the imagination of his audience; and he tells how, being called on to return thanks for a toast to his health, he rose, bowed to his audience, said, "Gentlemen," and then sat down, leaving it to their imagination to supply the rest.

Father D. had been instructing the Sunday school children on the subject of divine grace. When Johnny M. returned home he asked the servant girl what was the meaning of grace. "Ah, Johnny, avic," she answered, "don't you know what graise is? Shure, graise is fat male."

"I've got a new pair of boots," said A to B, putting one forward as a sample "a handsome fit, eh? I bought them to wear in genteel society." "They will be likely to last you a lifetime, then," rejoined B, "and be worth something to your heirs."

An exchange has the following characteristic prayer from the heart of a little boy. He had evidently had a little unpleasantness: "Please God, bless papa and mamma, and—and—and if you're a'mind to, you may bless Aunt Effie—but I don't care much."

A Bald man made merry at the expense of another who covered his partial baldness with a wig, adding, as a clincher, "You see how bald I am, I don't wear a wig." "True," was the retort, "but an empty barn requires no thatch."

A noble red man aged twenty-one years, has already raised five crops of real hair—the first crop gray, and the last a beautiful silken brown. We cannot tell a lie—he raised them with his little tomahawk.

"You say," said the judge to a witness, "that the plaintiff resorted to an ingenious use of circumstantial evidence; state just exactly what you mean by that." "Well," said the witness, "my exact meaning is that he lied."

"Six of one and a half dozen of the other," a Dutchman rendered, "half a dozen mit von and der order mit six."
