

Mad Dogs in Susquehanna County.

Cattle and Sheep Dying with Hydrophobia—Great Excitement in that Locality.

Mr. Bunnell, of Scranton, a few days since returned home from Susquehanna county, and relates to the editor of the Republican the following sad story of the anxiety in Clifford township, for the future of some of the people, and also the suffering of animals, from what is now believed to be hydrophobia.

During the holidays, after the family of Mr. Richard Davis had retired for the night, they heard an unusual noise about the barn. Young John Davis got up, took his gun and went out to the barn, and there he saw a dog. He fired, but missed the animal.

The dog was buried and nothing more was thought of the matter until one day last week. On Tuesday last two cows of Mr. Runnell's were taken sick, and frothed and foamed at the mouth in a fearful manner.

The cows, when working in these spasms or fits, would bite at anything that came in their way, moan in the most pitiful manner, and drop to the ground, and their eyes were glassy and fairly starting from their sockets when the fit was leaving them.

While this state of affairs was existing, a school teacher from Greenville, Luzerne county, happened in the neighborhood of Clifford, and being informed of the terrible disease that was among the cattle, and their manner of performing, said that a friend of his short distance from Greenville had thirteen sheep died from the effects of the bite of a mad dog, and proved it to be the one that had been seen at the place named above, and had left Greenville about the holidays, in a mad fit.

Mr. Williams also lost one cow from the same cause. It is not known how many cattle have been bitten, as large numbers were running out on the different farms.

Since the fact has been established that the cows were bitten by a mad dog the gentlemen who had been doctoring the cattle are very much alarmed, especially Mr. Tobias, who had the cut on his hand.

Mayor of Detroit in Trouble.

Mayor Moffat was before the recorder's court last week charged with tearing down small post cards from his neighbor's house. He claimed the cards were not posted in accordance with law, and were so placed that they could not be read from the street, a circumstance which prompted the street Arabs to run up to the afflicted houses to read the cards, give out unearthy screeches and run away, and he claims as a conservator of the peace it was his duty to remove the cards.
