HUMOROUS.

John Visits a Fair. I shall remember Rome. Years ago the citizens got up a fair to try and raise money to buy a minister a night shirt. I went to it. The clerks at the fair were fair females. I gave a gal a five-dollar bill for a chicken's hind leg without any gravy on it, and she never gave me any change back. I remarked that was dear. She offered to bet me the price of the penwiper that it wasn't. I took the bet, and says I to a gal she had with her: "Don't you think that it is dear?" "No, sir," said she, "I know it ain't dear, it's chicken."

How it Happened. A few days ago Mr. H. was sent by his employer to do some work in a house.—When he called he found a company of ladies present, and remarked to the lady of the house that he thought it best to take the work into the yard. "O, no, no," said she, "it is cold in the yard, and you can work in this room where it is nice and warm."

A comic twin story is reported from Dustin. A barber was waited upon one morning by a nice young gentleman, who desired the hairdresser's lowest terms per week for keeping his comely caput in condition. Thereafter the new customer appeared regularly every day for a "close shave," with frequent additions of shampooing and hair-cutting, and often twice a day. In short, the barber marveled much at the rapidity with which this young man's beard and hair grew, and the mystery was only solved after a considerable lapse of time, when one day, "two of him" came into the shop at once for a shave. The original customer who made the bargain had a twin brother so exactly like him in personal appearance that "one couldn't tell 'o'her from which," and the two had been getting the attentions of the tonsor for the price paid for one.

Several conceited young men were assembled on a street corner when a poor Dutchman approached. One of them said to his companions: "Boys, I'm going to have some fun. Just watch me fool this Dutchy!" He went up to the German to whom he said: "Kaiser, don't you want to buy a dog?" The person addressed quickly responded: "Y-a-a-s I just want to buy a little puppy 'bout your size. Are you for sale?" The puppy struck off, the laughter of his comrades making him purple with rage.

A rich old fellow who owns more houses than any one man in Toledo, was waited upon by a committee for a subscription to rebuild the fence about the cemetery. His reply was characteristic as well as humorous. "Gentlemen, I have always made it a rule in my business, never to make any repairs until the tenants began to complain."

Tirence (Bricklayer's Laborer, acclimatized, to Paddy, (just from Cork), Sell yer Pig an Fournichurean', come over wid Biddy to this blissed country. I get a dollar and seventy cints a day for car'n bricks up a ladder, an', be Jabers, there's a poor devil up at the top doin' all the work for me!"

"My brudders," said a waggish colored man to a crowd, "in all affliction, in all ob your troubles, there is one place you can always find sympathy." "Whar? whar?" shouted several. "In de dictionary," he replied, rolling his eyes skyward. Dryden was so bound up in his books that his wife exclaimed: "I wish I were a book that I might always be in your society." "I wish you were an almanac, so I could change you every year," replied he. A Bishop, fond of hunting, being rebuked that the apostles never hunted, replied, "No; shooting was very bad in Palestine, so they went fishing instead."
