FARM AND HOUSEHOLD ITEMS

We invite communications from all persons who are interested in matters properly belonging to this department.

A Piece of Legal Advice.

Rennes, the ancient capital of Brittany, is a famous place for law. People come. there from the extremities of the country to get information and ask advice. To visit Rennes without getting advice appears impossible to a Breton. This was true at the latter end of the last century, just as it it is at present, and especially among the country people, who are a timid and cautions race.

Now it happened that a farmer named Bernard, having come to Rennes on business, bethought himself that as he had a few hours to spare, it would be well to employ them in getting the advice of a good lawyer. He had often heard of Monsieur Potier de la Germondaie, who was in such repute, that people considered a lawsuit gained when he undertook their cause. The countryman inquired for his address, and proceeded to his home in Rue St. Georges. The clients were numerous, and Bernard had to wait some time. At length his turn arrived, and he was introduced. M. Potier de la Germondaie signed him to be seated, then taking off his spectacles, and placing them on his table, he requested to know his business ..

"Why, Mr. Lawyer," said the farmer, twirling his hat, " I have heard so much of you, that as I have come to Rennes I wish to take the opportunity of consulting you."

"I thank you for your confidence, my friend; you wish to bring an action, perhaps?"

"An action! oh, I hold that in abhortence! Never has Pierre Bernard had a word with any one."

"Then is it a settlement-a division of property ?"

"Excuse me, Mr. Lawyer; my family and I never had a division, seeing that we all draw from the well, as they say."

"Well, is it to negotiate a purchase or a sale 2"

"Oh, no; I am neither rich enough to purchase, nor poor enough to sell ?"

"Will you tell me, then, what you do want of me," said the lawyer, in surprise.

"Why, I have already told you, Mr. Lawyer," replied Bernard. "I want your advice-for payment, of course, as I am well able to give it to you, and I don't wish to lose this opportunity.'

M. Potier took a pen and paper, and askked the countryman his name.

"Pierro Bernard," replied the latter, quite happy that he was understood. "Your age?"

"Thirty years, or very near it."

"Your vocation"

"My vocation! Oh, that means what I do?" I am a farmer.

The lawyer wrote two lines, folded the paper and handed it to his strange client. "Is it finished already? Well and good.

What is the price of that advice, Mr. Law-"Twenty francs."

Bernard paid his money and took his leave, delighted that he had taken advantage of his opportunity.

When he reached home it was four o'clock; the journey had fatigued him, and he determined to rest for the remainder of the day. In the meantime the hay had been two days cut, and was completely cured. One of the workingmen came to ask if it should be drawn in.

"What, this evening?" exclaimed the farmer's wife, who had come to meet her husband. "It would be a pity to commence the work so late, since it can be done to work so late, since it can be done to morrow without any inconvenience." The man objected that the weather might change; that the horses were already and the hands idle. But the farmer's wife replied that the wind was in a good quarter, and that night would set in before their work could be completed. Bernard, who had been listening to the argument, was uncertaint which way to deargument, was uncertain which way to de-cide, when he suddenly recollected that he cide, when he suddenly recollected that he had the lawyer's advice in his pocket.

"Wait a minute," he exclaimed; "I have an advice, and a famous one, too, that I paid twenty francs for; it ought to tell us what to do. Here, Theresa, see what it says; you can read written hand better than I." The woman took the paper and read these lines.

read these lines:
"NEVER PUT OFF TILL TO-MORROW

"Never put off the to-mornow what you can no to-day."

His wife ventured a few more suggestions, but he declared that he had not bought a twenty-frane opinion to make no use of it, and that he would follow the lawyer's advice. He himself set the example by taking the lead in the work, and not returning till all the hay was brought in. The event seemed to prove the wisdom of his conduct, for the westher changed, an unexpected storm burst over the valley, add the next morning it was found that the river had overflowed and carried away all the hay that had been left in the fields. The crops of the neighboring farmers were completely destroyed. Bernard alone had not suffered.

The success of the first experiment gave

The success of the first experiment gave him such faith in the advice of the lawyer that from that day forth he adopted it as the rule of his conduct, and became, by his order and diligence, one of the richest farmers in the country. He never forgot the service done him by M. Potier de al Germondaie, to whom he carried a couple of his finest fowls every year as a token of gratitude.
