Barnum's Balcony Band. P. T. Barnum's band, in its palmy days, was celebrated for doing the worst playing heard. It was profitable, however, as the this anecdote goes to show. One morning the paper contained an advertisement-"Wanted a trombone player for Barnum's Balcony Band. Apply between ten and two at the office of the Museum."

So, about eleven o'clock the office door opened, and a trombone entered, and a man behind it.

"You want a trombone player?" inquired the new comer.

"Yes," replied Mr. Barnum. "What is the place worth?" asked the applicant. "Oh, about twenty-five dollars a week, I suppose," said Barnum. "Very well, I should like it."

"All right," said Barnum; and all the week through the trombone was at its

Then came Saturday, and Mr. Green the trombone-player, presented himself for his salary. Mr. Barnum handed him a paper on which was written. "Mr. P. Green to Mr. P. T. Barnumto playing trombone on his balcony one week, 25 dollars. Received payment, August 11, 1852." Mr. Green read the bill, smiled, and then looked at Barnum. "Well," said Barnum, "it's all right, isn't it ?" "Why," returned Green, "the place is right, but you have made such a funny mistake-you have made me the debtor instead of you." "I see no mistake in that," said Barnum. You are the one that has made the mistake. You see, the case is this. There are a good many gentlemen in this city who are fond of practicing on brass instruments, but they cannot do so at home on account of the neighbor's objections. So I furnish them a room on my balcony during so many hours per day, where it does no harm, the street being so very noisy, and they pay me a sum per week for my trouble in keeping the organization full. You must have thought me green to

Capt. Fred Luce, more than forty years ago, commander of a little tub-like steamer, called the Huron, that plied daily between Detroit and Monroe, on the Detroit river. Capt. Fred was always profuse in his talk when the speed of his craft was called in question, and many a passenger was induced to take a ride with him, being assured by the urbane Fred that no boat could beat him. Leaving Detroit one morning in June, 1830, with quite a load of passengers, many of whom had been told that they should be landed at Monroe, long before the Daniel Webster, a first class steamer, which left Detroit about the same time, could reach there, Capt. Fred's tub labored down the man is not." A Yale student, who is evidently in the "Journalistic" Department, writes a twelve-verse poem for the Waverly Magazine, which he entitled: "We Kissed Each Other by the Sea." Well, what of it? The seaside is no better for such practice than any other locality. In fact, we have put in some very sweet work of that kind near the tow-path of a canal in our time, but did not say anything about it in print.

13" A gentleman called at the house of an honest old lady, for the purpose of collecting a small debt. Not collecting the amount, he promised to send in his bill that evening. The old woman supposing that he meant his son William, replied, "Oh la, our Sall never sit up with any one yit; but Bill's a clever boy, and they may build a fire in t'other room."

A horrid small boy quite marred his sister's pleasure during a recent examination of school teachers, at Oswego, by entering the room abruptly and shouting-"Annie I your feller's down to the house Philadelphia Pa and wants yer."
