HUMOROUS ITEMS.

According to a Missouri paper, there is a man in that State so tall he has to get on his knees to scratch his head.

Our school-boy remarks that when his teacher undertakes to show him what is what, he only finds out which is switch.

"Sir," said a Yankee, "you promised to vote for my bill." "Vell," said the Dietcher member, "vat if I did?" "Well, sir, you voted against it." "Vell, vat if I did?" "Well, sir, you tied." "Vell eat if I did?"

It was a brilliant Mattoon boy who, seeing a dog with a muzzle on for the first time, exclaimed: "Mamma, mamma, I bet five cents the dogs are going to wear hoop skirts; there goes a dog with one on his nose!"

A Hartford milk peddler named Sage, recently committed suicide. As all the pumps in the neighborhood were in good working order, and a never-failing stream of water running through his premises, no cause can be assigned for the rash act. It is the prevailing opinion that Sage didn't act sagely.

An old bachelor said, "there's a darned sight more jewelry worn now-a-days than when I was young. But there's one piece that I always admired which I don't often see." "What is that?" asked a young lady. "A thimble," was the reply. He was regarded with contempt and scorn by every lady in the room for the rest of the evening.

"Are you a skillful mechanic?" "Yes sir."

"What can you make?" "Oh, most anything in my line." "Can you make a devil?"

"Certainly—just put up your foot, and I will split it in three seconds; I never saw a chap in my life that required less alteration."

A school inspector, examining the boys, put them through their "animal kingdom," and in the course of his performance rather grandly exclaimed, "Now, can any of you boys name to me an animal of the order Edentata—that is, a front-tooth toothless animal?" A boy at once smitten with wisdom replied, "I can." "Well, what is the animal?" "My grandmother!" replied the boy.

A Pennsylvania farmer recently sent his son to a store with twenty-six dozen of eggs, telling him to "set on them" going down a hill, so that the wagon would not jolt them out. The boy sat on them, but not the way his father intended; and when he reached the store, four dozen eggs and his pantaloons were ruined. When he returned home his father chided him with a check-strap, and he hasn't had an appetite for sitting down since.

One of the boys at Camp Noble, Indiana, was lately put on guard, and reported to his captain in the morning that he was abused by a fellow because he would not allow him to pass.

"Well," said the captain, "what did you do?" "Do? Why, I remonstrated with him."

"And to what effect?" "Well, I don't know to what effect, but the barrel of my gun is bent."

"I had more money than he had to carry on the suit," said a very mean individual who had just won a lawsuit over a poor neighbor, "and that's where I had the advantage of him. Then I had much better counsel than he, and there I had the advantage of him. And his family were sick while the suit was pending so he couldn't attend to it, and there I had the advantage of him again. But, then, Brown is a very decent sort of a man, after all." "Yes," said his listener, "and there's where he had the advantage of you."

A well known baldheaded banker, who always prides himself in being a self-made man, during a recent talk with a friend had occasion to remark that he was the architect of his own destiny—that he was a selfmade man. "W-w-what d-did you s-say?" asked the friend who stutters. "I say with pride that I am a selfmade man that I made myself—" "Hold, interrupted the friend, "w-while you were m-m-making yourself why the Dickens d-did-didn't you p-put some more h-hair on the top of y-your h-head?"

A man in a neighboring town having heard that the ague could be cured by crawling head first down stairs when the chill is coming on, tried it the other day. He felt the dreaded approach of the shake, and, dropping on his hands and knees, started down the front stairs.— Just as he started two old ladies came up on the stoop to consult his wife in regard to shipping seven hundred neck ties to the poor of New York, and it so happened that the moment they opened the door he lost his balance and came down upon them like an avalanche with spokes in it, and before they could even think of saving themselves the enemy was among them, and the next instant a horrible mixture of humanity and cloth went revolving across the sidewalk and into the street, to the unaimed astonishment of the neighbors and to the unconcealed disgust of the participants. It cured him, though.
