HUMOROUS.

A Funny Fight.

There was an American ship at Panama, not long ago, and the sailor boys thought they would astonish the natives in the way of cock-fighting. They had a bald eagle, which they transformed, by clipping of wings and ruthlessly pulling out of tail, into a rooster of the most ridiculous aspect imaginable. This nondescript animal was entered for a fight. The game cocks were a way, when first placed in the ring, of crouching and pointing at each other.— Then they advance across the intervening space, and meeting in the centre, with heads erect and fury in every movement, they fly at one another, each endeavoring to drive his long steel spur into the head or breast of his adversary. On this occasion the Panama bird, victor in many a well-fought battle, began his usual tactics, while his clumsy adversary, nestled quietly where he had been placed, and paid no attention to him. Anticipating an easy victory, the jeyous game-cock now advanced without ceremony, and delivered one or two smart blows, somewhat damaging the acquiline features of the foe; whereat old Sleepy, without taking the trouble to rise, quietly reached out a claw, caught the frisky warrior and pulled off his head! This was unscientific but conclusive.

You are a Brick.

A certain college professor had assembled his class at the commencement of the term, and was reading over the list of names to see that all were present. It chanced that one of the number was unknown to the professor, having just entered the class. "What is your name, sir?" asked the professor, looking through his spectacles. "You are a brick," was the startling reply. "Sir," said the professor, half starting out of his chair at the supposed impertinence, but not quite sure that he had understood him correctly; "Sir! I did not exactly understand your answer." "You are a brick," was again the composed reply. "This is intolerable," said the professor, his face reddening. "Beware, young man how you attempt to insult me." "Insult you!" said the student, in turn astonished. "How have I done it?" "Did you not say I was a brick?" replied the professor with stifled indignation. "No, sir, you asked me my name, and I answered your question. My name is U. R. A. Brick—Uriah Reynold Anderson Brick." "Ah, indeed!" murmured the professor, sinking back into his seat in confusion; "it was a misconception on my part. Will you commence the lesson, Mr.—ahem—Brick?"

Swallowing a House.

John Haynes, while on a bender, recently made a mistake very natural to one in his condition. He imagined that he was indulging in copious libations of benzine, when, in fact, he was drinking genuine linned oil. Shortly after John felt a queer taste coming into his mouth. The first thought that occurred to him was that he was poisoned. A physician was sent for, and he applied a stomach pump. "Is there arsenic in it, doctor?" faintly inquired the patient. "No," replied the Esculapius, "it smells like a newly-painted house." "What?" screamed John. "It smells like a newly-painted house," repeated the physician. "Doctor," said the now excited patient, "you don't mean to tell me that I've swallowed a house?"

An Auburn, Me., fisherman a few days since, while fishing through a hole in the ice, caught a trout so large it could not be brought through the orifice. The fisherman, however, gently played his fish with one hand while he chopped the ice with the other, until the opening had been enlarged sufficiently, then with a skillful jerk he brought out a dead cat with a brick on its neck, the entire prize weighing over nine pounds. The profanity which ensued caused a heavy thaw for sixty rods in all directions.

"Got any medicine?" asked a boy, entering a Pittsburg drug store, the other day.

"Yes, lots and gobs of it; what kind do you want?" inquired the clerk.

"Oh! it don't matter, so its pretty lively. Dad's dreadful bad."

"What ails him?" asked the clerk.

Dunno, but he's run down awful. He just sits around the stove all day, and mopes, and he hasn't wolloped mother since Christmas. I guess he is going to pass in his checks."

"Who is that pretty girl?" asked a well known Boston divine at a wedding.

"That is Miss Glass," answered a friend.

"Let the young men of Boston beware of such an intoxicating Glass," was the quick reply.

A young lady in Greenville, Tennessee, recently presented her lover with an elaborately constructed pen-wiper, and was astonished the following Sunday to see him wearing it as a cravat.
