HUMOROUS.

Dropping a Pop. Mr. W. C., of Elliot city, a conceited snob, was so fond of fine clothing that he reveled in them by day, and dreamed of them by night. One evening he visited a young lady, and as he removed his overcoat, etc., in the hall, preparatory to entering the parlor, the lady overheard him utter the following sensible remarks:

Taking his overcoat and hanging it up, he said: "Hang there, you fifty-dollar overcoat!" Pulling off his gloves and putting them on the table: "Lay there, you five-dollar gloves!" Placing his hat on the rack: "Hang there, you ten-dollar hat!" Putting his cane in the corner: "Stand there, you fifteen-dollar cane!"

Then entering the parlor he was about to sit down, when the young lady pulled the chair from under him, and as she left the room, said: "Lay there, you two-cent fool!" He has not been seen around that house since.

A character noted somewhat for loafing around bar-rooms, was sitting in his usual place of resort, with several compatriots, about a card-table, killing time with the paste-boards. Suddenly his wife entered the room, bearing a covered dish, which she deposited on the table, with the remark: "presuming, husband, that you were too busy to come home to dinner, I have brought yours to you," and then departed. The husband invited his companions to share his meal, and removed the lid from the dish, revealing no smoking roast, but instead a slip of paper, on which was written: "I hope you will enjoy your dinner; it is of the same kind your family has at home."

At an elegant dinner party the enfant terrible of the family was permitted to occupy a seat near one of the most distinguished guests. This boy is much given to conundrums, which are not always appropriate. Moreover, the young man has a sister who is a shining belle in society. Eliza is the name of the young lady but the young scapegrace will call her Lize. The company was startled by the voice of the youngster asking, "Why is father like the devil?" An awkward pause ensued. Then he shouted out, "Because he is the father of Lize!" (lies.) That boy did not get his dessert, for he was sent to bed.

Salt Williams, of Detroit, having been on a three days' bender in New York, strolled into an intelligence office, and asked: "Is this an intelligence office?" "Yes," said the keeper. "What's your fee?" inquired the Salt; and upon being informed he threw down a dollar bill. "Well," asked the proprietor, "What information do you want?" "I want you to tell me," stammered he, "where I've been for the last three days."

During a recent trial in the Supreme Court, the presiding Judge interrupted a lady who was giving her testimony, and remarked that her statements were irrelevant, whereupon she bridled up and exclaimed, "I should like to know, Judge, who is the witness in this case, you or I?" The Judge smiled, and the witness went on with her story without further interruption.

A little fellow, who had just commenced reading the papers, asked his father if the word "Hon." prefixed to the name of Mr. P——, a member of Congress, meant "honest?" That little fellow has a mind for investigation.

A Troy dentist became emotionally insane while repairing a front tooth for a pretty woman and kissed her. She told her husband, and he went round the next day and borrowed $500 of the dentist on long time.

Down East, when they want to speak of a man's liberality, and yet don't want to praise him too much, they say he has a heart as big as Rhode Island.

A punster, observing a gentleman folding some bank notes, remarked, "You must be in excellent business, as I see you double your money very easy."

"I can't drink liquor," said Bob; "it goes right to my head." "Well," said Bob's friend, "where could it go with less danger of being crowded?"

A Lawrence man was afraid he would forget the ten commandments, so he stole a Bible from a church, that he might have them at hand always.

The maddest man in Camden is Smith. He wound up his clock regularly every night for fifteen years, and then discovered that it was an eight day clock.

The motto of the Good Templar girls of Salem, N. J., is; "The lips that touch wine shall never touch mine."

Mrs. Snipkins says that her husband is a "three handed man—right hand left hand and a little behind hand."
