HUMOROUS.

Getting into Hot Water. There is a doctor in this city, says the San Francisco Chronicle, who has a speaking tube leading from the main entrance of the building to his office, which is up just a few flights. For several days past a smart young man named Swartz, has amused himself by calling through the tube pipe for the doctor, and then profanely ordering him to set out on an excursion for Tartarus. For some time this fun was taken in good part until the fine humor of the joke no longer became apparent. Accordingly one afternoon, the disciple of Esculapius provided himself with a tea-kettle of water, heated to about 210 degrees Fahrenheit and waited alongside the pipe. Pretty soon the old familiar sound came up through the pipe: "Say, Doc., how's Trick?" "Tricks is better; I guess he'll get well!" responded the doctor, reaching out after the ten-kettle.

"What has been the matter with him?" "He's got burnt." "How?" "You got." The doctor had finished his last sentence and then let a quart of scalding water down the pipe. Swartz had his mouth over it, and when the water struck it he was somewhat surprised. Water was apt to surprise him, but hot water was an unexpected novelty. The man above poured in the water for about a minute, and then looked out of the window. The smart young man was getting along the sidewalk at a pretty lively gait having evidently just got up from a sitting posture. He was trying to yell "police," but couldn't articulate with much success. About half an hour afterwards he found himself able to speak and inquired: "Did that boiler explosion hurt anybody?"

"What kin I git you?" asked a clerk in a book-store of a boy customer. "Hoosier Schoolmaster," answered the boy. "Who's my schoolmaster?" cried the clerk, his face in a blaze, as he came round the counter with his fist doubled, "I'll show you who's my schoolmaster." The boy left instantanly, and concluded to apply for his book to some one whose conscience was not so tender on the subject of education.

Dr. T. sent by mail a bottle of homeopathic pellets to a patient, with the usual direction to the postmaster, "If not taken return in ten days," printed on the corner of the envelope. He was not a little surprised to receive on the eleventh day, the half empty bottle, with a note from the patient, saying that he had returned them as requested, although they had done him a great deal of good, and he should have been glad to have taken them a little longer.

A bachelor editor was traveling all alone by himself. His baggage consisted of but one extra shirt, and that one a blue checked one. The baggage man accosted him with: "Any baggage, sir?" "Yes, sir." "Let me see your checks." The editor cautiously unravelled the bundle, and holding up his shirt, asked the fellow if he could see the checks. An umph! in basso continuendo, and the expressmen was gone.

A Plain Answer. Nimrod—"Have you seen a deer pass this way, boy? You know what a deer is like?" Youth—"Noa, I don't!" Nimrod—"Why, something like a donkey, with short ears. Have you seen anything answering to that description?" "Noa, not till yeau come by!"

Pop corn parties are something new over in Snyder county. The gentlemen are not permitted to get "corned" but they can "pop" as much as they please, provided they please the young ladies in doing so. An Iowa country squire concludes the martial knot thusly:—"Them that the court hath joined together let no man bust asunder; but suffer little children to come unto them so help you God."

A young woman in Wisconsin recently poured a potful of glue over her lover, because he didn't seem disposed to stick to her. One of the Irish newspapers contains an advertisement announcing as lost, a cloth cloak belonging to a gentleman lined with blue.

What is the difference between the engine-driver and a passenger who has missed the train?—One is right in front, and the other is left behind. There is a woman in Duluth who weighs 300 pounds. At a little distance it is difficult to tell which is the larger of the two, the town or the woman. A little boy being asked: "What is the chief end of man?" replied, "The end what's got the head on."
