

A Stranger Robbed, Killed and Disjointed in Chester County.

A special correspondent at Penningtonville furnishes the following account of the late murder near that place:

Friday evening a farmer residing near here was walking through the woods close to his home, when his attention was attracted to a man's boot sticking out of the ground. He gave it a kick, and finding it solid, caught hold with both hands. Giving a strong pull, he was perfectly horrified to find that he had unearthed not only a boot, but the leg of a man! Hastily calling for assistance he proceeded to investigate the matter further. The efforts of himself and the other men, who had now arrived, were rewarded by finding the body of a man, with both legs and arms cut off, his throat severed from ear to ear, and three stabs through his body, the entire sickening mass being wrapped up in two horse blankets? Some explanation is thus given:

A coroner summoned a jury, when the following facts were described: Samuel W. Rhodes testified that his brother-in-law, Wm. Udderzook, of Baltimore city, had had written to him last fall or winter that if he wanted to make a thousand dollars to come on to Baltimore, telling him how to come, how to pay, so as to avoid being known that he was away from home, and that he could return home the next day that much richer, and no one know anything about it. His plan was murder and robbery, as he said, and wanted Rhodes to go into the plot with him. Rhodes made no reply to his letter and thought no more of the matter until the first of July when Udderzook put in his personal appearance at his mother's, at Jennerville, and from there came on to the residence of Mr. Rhodes, but he not being at home, he with his sister, Mr. Rhodes' wife, went after him at Mr. Baldwin's where he was harvesting, and informed him that he had his friend with him at Jennerville, and that he wanted him to join him in robbing him, that they could procure something at the drug store to render him unconscious, when the money could be obtained.

He desired Rhodes to loan him his horse and wagon to bring this friend of his up to his (Rhodes') house, for a few days, so that this deed could be done there, to all of which Mr. Rhodes peremptorily declined, and remarked he had better abandon such ideas and go home. He remarked that he was going to do it anyhow and left him, coming to Penningtonville. Hiring a horse and buggy of Mr. O. A. Baldwin he left, saying he was going to Jennerville for his friend to bring him up to his sister's for a few days. He went to Jennerville, got his friend, and they were seen to leave the village about 6 o'clock in the evening, and that was the last seen of the man alive.

The horse and buggy were returned to Mr. Baldwin that night about midnight, with the loss of blankets, oil cloth, etc. Nothing was thought about the loss of these articles, as it was presumed the man was or had been under the influence of liquor. The price of the blankets was demanded and was paid by Udderzook, and thus the matter ended. Mr. Rhodes disclosed his suspicions to several of his friends, and among the number was G. P. Moore, who on hunting through the woods on the evening of Friday, July 11th, accidentally discovered the dead body of a man with the arms and limbs both cut off, the throat cut and four or five stabs in the chest and body, any one of which would have caused death.

When these facts were made known, the buggy was carefully examined, and blood was found on it in several places, the dash was bent and the leather of it torn, besides the bows being broken, showing that the act of killing was done in the buggy. In the buggy was found a handsome ring, which has been identified as the one the murdered man wore. The body having lain from July 1 to July 11, was too much decomposed for identification from the features, but the general appearance, size, color of hair and whiskers leave no doubt that this was the friend Udderzook left Jennerville with on the evening of July 1, with an evil intention to kill and rob, which he certainly did.

Other evidence showed that he returned with the horse and wagon to Penningtonville about 6 o'clock on the night of July 1, minus the stranger, whom he said he had taken to Parkesburg and there put him on a train going East. On examining the wagon after Udderzook had left Penningtonville, shortly after returning it to the livery stable, one of the ribs and the dashboard were found to be broken, besides some blood on the floor of the vehicle. A shirt stud and a large seal ring were also found on the floor which have been fully identified as those worn by the victim. Two blankets belonging to the wagon were found missing, which on Udderzook's being interrogated as to their whereabouts, he said he supposed they had been lost, and for which he paid.

Whoever did the work of amputating the arms and legs of the murdered man, displayed an evident knowledge of anatomy, the work being accomplished in a manner as would have done honor to a surgeon rather than to a fustian butcher in human type.

A requisition from Governor Hartranft has already been placed in the hands of Sheriff Gill, who, with it, is now en route to Baltimore in the hope of arresting Udderzook.
