HUMOROUS.

Slimmer's Accordeon. Slimmer was a peddler. On his way to the Pacific coast, he stopped over night in a village belonging to the Shoshone Indians. Slimmer amused his entertainers in the evening by playing "Kathleen Mavourneen" upon an accordeon. When he had squeezed out the tune three or four hundred times, the Shoshone chief told Slimmer he would give anything to possess such an instrument as that. Then a happy thought struck Slimmer. He had six hundred pairs of bellows, which he was taking out to a settlement in Oregon, and, without a qualm of conscience, he disposed of them on the spot to the chief at two hundred and fifty per cent, advance on the cost. That morning Slimmer left. For the next two days the chief remained at home, working one pair of bellows after another in a vain endeavor to evolve "Kathleen Mavourneen" from the nozzles; and, when he had strained himself until he burst three or four blood vessels, his wives took a hand. Then all the members of the tribe tried; and the medicine man seized one pair and fled to the woods, and howled over it and screeched, and sat on a fence and worked the handles up and down until he fainted, and not a solitary note of "Kathleen Mavourneen" disturbed the impressive solitude of that vast wilderness. And they caught a white man and drove a stake through him, and built a bonfire on his bosom, and made him try; and he even failed to organize a concert upon the Mavourneen basis. And now, whenever you meet a Shoshone Indian anywhere, he always asks if you know a man named Slimmer. They are looking for Slimmer. They want him. They want to lead him out to some retired spot and remove his cuticle, and chip him off little by little until they work down to his skeleton.

Which is Which. "Ah, Pat, Pat," said a schoolmistress to a thickheaded urchin, into whose muddy brain she was attempting to beat the alphabet, "I'm afraid you'll never learn anything. Now, what's that letter, eh?" "Sure, don't you know, ma'am?" replied Pat. "I thought you would have recollected that."

"Because it has a dot over the top of it."

"Och, ma'am! I mind it well; but sure I thought it was a fly-speck."

"Well, now remember, Pat, its I."

"You, ma'am?"

"No, no not U, but I."

"Not I; but you, ma'ma. How's that?"

"Not U, but I, blockhead."

"O, yes; faith, now I have it, ma'ma you mean to say that you not I, am a blockhead."

"Fool! fool!" exclaimed the pedagogues, almost burning with rage.

"Just as you please," replied Pat; "fool or blockhead, it's no matter to me which ye are so long as ye are free to own it."

A Detroit negro prisoner, on his way to the penitentiary for larceny, was asked what he thought of his trial. He said, "When dat lawyer dat fended me made his speech, I made shuah I was going to take my ole hat and walk right out of dat co't-room; but when de odder lawyer got up and commenced talking, I knew I was de biggest rascal on top of de earth."

Near the close of the first day of a great meeting of hardshell baptists, in Georgia, [the local preacher said, alluding to the meeting to be held next day: "I hope that the congregation will be here by ten o'clock, for precisely at that hour we will march to the creek, where I shall proceed to baptize four adults and six adulteresses."

He met Miss Kitty at the ball. After talking about the balloon ascension, the weather, and other things, he said abruptly: "Where is your mother?" "Oh," said the sweet damsel, "I have left her at home. I generally do when I come to a ball. What is home without a mother?"

A Patronizing Damsel. Miss Margaret, aged nine [to mamma who is a widow and has no sons]—"I'm very glad uncle has come to stop, with us, mamma. It's nice to have a man about the house!"

Some one truthfully says that it is about as wise to get mad at the editor, and stop your paper, as it is to refuse to get your mail matter because you don't like the postmaster.

An artist painted a bottle of champagne so natural that the cork flew out. That's nothing, said his hearer. A friend of mine painted a hen so natural that it laid a fresh egg every morning.

One man reprimanding another, said that he talked like a fool. "True," he replied; "but it is that you may understand me."
