

The Largest Clothing House in America is "Oak Hall"

Wanamaker & Brown, Southeast Cor. of Sixth and Market Streets, Philadelphia.

The greatest of Grecian philosophers declared that man was simply a biped without feathers, and one of the chief objects of existence of a large class of men among civilized communities seems to be, most tastefully to make up for this deficiency. "What to eat," and "Wherewithal shall we be clothed?" are the two great questions which make up the sum of man's temporal wants. As we advance in culture we also improve in dress, and our perfection in the latter is no bad criterion of our position in the scale of civilization and refinement.

The ready-made clothing business in this country has made prodigious strides; and under the stimulating influences of taste combined with energy and capital, this country can claim to be one of the best-dressed nations on the globe. New York City for many years had almost exclusive control of this influential branch of trade, and vast firms have been established and grown in wealth and influence.

New York may well be envious of the great fame which has been achieved by the well-known firm of Wanamaker & Brown, whose famous establishment in Philadelphia, called Oak Hall, has perhaps the widest reputation of any clothing house in America. The success of this house has been due in a very great degree to the perseverance and untiring industry of Mr. Wanamaker, the senior member of the firm, and it is especially remarkable from the unprecedentedly short time in which that success has been attained. When he determined to embark in this business old merchants shook their heads, and even the most venturesome felt a doubt as to the expediency of entering upon new projects. The rebellion was just on the eve of its commencement, and the whole future of the country seemed enveloped in doubt and danger. But Mr. Wanamaker had too sure an instinct to feel any doubts as to the final triumph of the right, and having associated himself with the late Nathan S. Brown, he leased three rooms in an old and unsightly building on the site of their present immense establishment. Mr. Brown's interest in the business expired with his death five years ago.

In the short space of two years the business increased to such a degree, that the firm were obliged to add to their premises the rest of the building on the corner of Sixth and Market Streets. Before the expiration of the term (five years), for which the original lease had been given, an extension of the same was obtained with the privilege of purchasing, together with the right to expend $40,000 in improvements upon the property. A rather doubtful privilege and a large sum for so young a firm.

The next step was to purchase the adjoining property on Sixth street, extending to Minor Street, and shortly after that on Market street was added. The whole buildings were then remodeled into a large and imposing structure 33 feet front and rear on Market and Minor streets, and 180 feet deep on Sixth street and six stories in height. Large as were these premises they were but one half the size of the present Oak Hall. Another building of equal size was added and the whole connected and thrown into one vast establishment.

We have as yet spoken nothing of the details of the enormous business transacted by this house. System is the soul of everything, and is one of the primary elements which have conducted to its wonderful success. This business is divided into twenty distinct departments in which are employed over two thousand hands. Every branch of the trade is carried on within the building, and under the immediate personal supervision of the proprietors. The goods are received in the piece directly from the mills and the completed garments are delivered in the warehouse with a rapidity which is truly astonishing. In addition to the department of ready-made clothing the house does a large business in its order department, and the excellency of its workmen is no where more perfectly displayed than in the graceful and becoming garments which are here made for some of the best dressed gentlemen in Philadelphia.

One great idea is the underlying principle upon which this vast business has been built up. And that is perfect conscientiousness and honorable dealing with the public. No old stock is crowded on the market after the fashion is changed. If no other way remains the prices are marked down at the close of the season to such prices as insure their ready sale. By these means trade is kept up even in dull times, all the employed are kept busy, the stock is ever fresh and new, and the house enjoys an unexampled prosperity.

We have thus very briefly given a sketch of this wonderful establishment, the growth of which as we have said is due to the admirable executive ability of Mr. Wanamaker. He is by no means, however, solely devoted to his business, large as it is, but is a patron of art in many branches and foremost among the prominent citizens of Philadelphia in broad and benevolent schemes of public and private charity.

Iron in the Blood

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and vitalized blood permeates every part of the body, repairing damages and waste, searching out morbid secretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhoea, Bolls, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.
