The Meanest Yet.

There is, unfortunately no lack of mean men within the world, and every little while there springs up in some small town a claimant for the honor of being the meanest man yet discovered. We now desire to confer upon the aforesaid yet another 'local habitation and name.' In the town of S-, Masa., lived two families in adjoining houses. They had been neighbors and friends for years : but at last the head of one family was taken sick with typhoid fever and died .-All the rest of the household lay dangerously ill with the same disease, and the oldest son followed his father so soon that one funeral served for both.

Sometime during the illness of their friends the family in the adjoining house had loaned the former two old-fashioned. yellow earthen-ware bowls which had not as yet been returned. As the funeral procession moved down the main street of the village, it passed the store kept by the owner of the precious crockery. Rushing out he stopped the front carriage which contained the brother of the deceased, whom he accosted in this manner: 'I s'pose you're Squire Beal's brother ?"

'Yes, sir.' 'Wal, I kinder thought you might know su'thin' 'bout two yaller bowls my wife lent his'n. Bein' sick so, I s'pose they kinder forgot 'bout 'em an'-

"All right, sir; they shall be seen to.

But this is no time to talk about anything of that kind." 'I know-I know; but I only wanted to say that I'd jist as soon not have 'em sent back, seen'n as how they've been used round in the sick room; but I'll take the pay for 'em instead. They cost me five cents apiece and's long's they were jist about as good's as new, I 'spose you won't begrudge payin' me the same's I giv for 'em-seein', too, as they've hed the use of

'em so long.' The ten cents he claimed was handed him without a word, and the procession there?

L. Did you ever see liquor there? W. No, s-i-r! L. Did you see anything containing iquors there?

L. Did you see any decanters or tumblers there? W. No, 8-i-r! L. Did you see any barrels or kegs

W. Not as I know of.

W. Yes; I saw some kags there! L. Ab, yes! (exultingly) you did, then, see some kegs! Now, sir, tell the jury what there was in those kegs.

W. Don't know, I didn't look in.

L. Yes, sir; but were there no marks upon the outside-tickets, or labels, or printing, or writing of some kind? W. Yes; well there was; I remember it neow; I veow I should have forgot it, if you hadn't put me in mine on't ! L. Oh yes, you do remember! Just state, then, sir, before you forget, what there was printed or written.

W. It was different on all of 'em ; none

L. Well, sir, tell us what it said on the first one you saw. W. Well, I mostly forget neow; but I bleve it said gin on the first one.

L. Gin! Then, sir, I guess we can find out what there was in those kegs, if it said on the next one?

W. Well, on the next one it said Ben Kimball; but I did't suppose Ben Kimball was inside the kag. Those old soakers never lack for arguments. Lately one replied to a temperance lecturer by the following poser:

"If water rots the soles of your boots, what effect must it have on the coat of your stomach. We cannot be too careful how we play with the English language. A short time since, a married lady, while admiring the falls from Warburton avenue bridge, remarked, "Isn't that dam nice?" 13 A gentleman who rather suspected some one was peeking through the keyhole of his office door, investigated with a syringe full of pepper-sauce, and went home to find that his wife had been cutting wood and a chip had hit her in the eye!

An undecided fellow courted a lady for twenty-eight years, and then married her. She turned out a perfect virage, but died in two years after the wedding .--"Now," said he, in a self-congratulating tone, "see what I have escaped by a long courtship."

It does seem too bad to call a mending girl "the evil one," but then she sews
