Scaring a Shoemaker.

An old French shoemaker, who boasted that nothing could frighten him, was put to the test by two young men. One of them pretended to be dead, and the other, going to the shoemaker induced him to "sit up" with the supposed corpse. The shoemaker was in a hurry with some work he had promised to have completed the next morning. So he took his tools and leather and began working beside the corpse. About 12 o'clock at night a cup of black coffee was brought him, to keep him awake. He drauk it and resumed work. About one o'clock the coffee having exhilerated him, forgetting that he was in the presence of death, he commenced to sing a lively tune, keeping time with his hammer. Suddenly the corpse arose and exclaimed, in a hollow voice: "When a man is in the presence of death he should not sing." The shoemaker started; then quietly seizing his stout leather strap, he suddenly dealt the corpse a blow on the head, exclaiming at the same time : "When a man is dead he should not speak," It was the last time they tried to scare the shoemaker. 13" Jurymen heard a long case in court, the testimony, the attorney's speeches, the judge's charge, and all. The jury retired, to render their verdict. It was a case of against the supervisors of a township. Well, the jurymen began to count noses to see how they stood. One was for convicting Jenkins and clearing Brown .-Another for convicting both; and some for clearing both. Finally the question was put to Honas Jokle, what was his judgment.

"Vell," said Honas, "I doesh not agree mit none of you. Jenkins and Brown may bote go for me; I don't dink as dey proofed anydings against dem. But dere is anoder feller vat I dinks ought to be convicted, dat is te feller dey calls de defendant-he's a tang rascal and no mishtake !" 137 Joneshad worried Smith with conundrums very often, and now it was

Smith's turn. "Guess what I did last night," said Smith. Jones thought of sundry improbable things, and suggested the making of a speech, the doing of a kindness, the getting himself into the lock-up, and finally gave up the conundrum in despair. "Well," said Smith, in a triumphant tone, "I slept !" Well, Mr. -

I suppose," he replied, "as Lazarus did."
"How was that?" "Wby," said he, "Lazarus was licked by dogs, and so was Tell a lady that you recently saw a lady acquaintance of hers, "What did she have on?" Tell her husband that you have seen an acquaintance of his, and you may be sure he will ask "What's he doing What's your business?" asked a judge of a prisoner at the bar. "Well, I s'pose you might call me a locksmith."-"When did you last work at your trade?" "Last night; when I heard a call for the perlice, I made a bolt for the front door."

A little boy in the West Ward ran into the house the other day, crying at the top of his voice, because another little boy wouldn't let him put mud on his head with a shingle. Some children are just like their parents; no accommodation about them.
