HENRY J. SOUDER

A Bashful Bridegroom.

The unfortunate's friends knew that he wanted to be married; they knew that he deserved to be; but they were quite certain that he never would be, if he waited until he found courage to pop the question; so took all the troubles off his hands, and by a series of rapid strategic moves had him "popped," accepted, and wifed before he could find a pretext for "wilting." So much accomplished, and the nuptial evening having passed off merrily, the young man's back boners withdrew at an an early hour, feeling that they could spare themselves further effort in their friend's behalf. About five minutes later, young Benedict, who had evidently been having a serious debate with himself, arose, took his hat, and with a nervous "good-night," made his exit. He was not seen again by the bride or her family until the following evening, when he timidly knocked at the door and was admitted.

No special comment being made upon his singular conduct, he passed an hour rather comfortably in the parlor; and everything seemed to promise favorably for a cure of the besetting weakness, when, hearing the household monitor proclaim the hour of nine, he suddenly seemed to remember he had forgotten something, and started for his hat. This was the moment and the event which had been somewhat expectantly awaited with indignation most profound, but under control, by the bride's mother. Planting herself resolutely in the door-way, the old lady demanded to know why and wherefore, what he proposed to do, and whether he was a man or only a feeble imitation, etc. ; in short, why he did not remain with his wife, instead of slinking back to his old quarters? The bashful son-in-law stammered out, as the elderly female seized his hat and backed him into a chair again : "Well, I should like to, but I thought may be I'd better wait awhile, for fear it might make talk among the neighbors !"

A Darkey's Tax Receipt.

A negro living in Georgia, having been fortunate enough to accumulate considerable of these world's goods, desired, as all royal subjects should, to pay tax on the same. It being a new business to him, he did not know there was a proper officer for receiving tax, and concluded all that was necessary was to find a man with a white skin. Consequently he hailed the first man he met with, "say, boss, I want to pay my tax; must I gib it to you?" On being told that it would be received by the comprehending white gentleman, the negro gave him $25, and asked if that was enough. "I suppose it is," said the white man. "Boss, give me showin' for dat," said the negro. Again the wits of the white man were at work, and he soon handed the negro a slip of paper with the inscription : "As Moses lifted the serpent out of the wilderness, likewise have I lifted $25 out of this d-n negro's pocket." Not long after this the negro met the tax collector proper. "Done paid it, boss, and here's de 'ccipt," at the same time handing the piece of paper to the officer. He read : "As Moses lifted the serpent out of the wilderness, likewise have I lifted $25 out of this d-n negro's pocket." "Hold on, boss, you have read um wrong," ejaculated the astonished darkey, as he snatched the paper and carried it to another man, who began to read. "As Moses lifted-," Here he was interrupted by the negro, who exclaimed : "Look-a-yar ; jest gim me dat paper, I'm gwine to lift dat white man out'n his boots, 'fore God I is." With this he left, and, not having been heard from since, it is supposed he is still looking for the man to whom he paid his tax.
