A Rallway Horror.

A frightful accident occurred on Saturday evening, the 28th ult., at 6 o'clock on the Great Western railroad, 3 miles east of Kokoma, and 7 miles west of London, by which a number of lives were lost and many persons badly burned and otherwise injured. A fire broke out in the water closet of a car by the lamps falling on the floor, and immediately the car took fire .-Efforts were made to subdue the flames, but without success, fire communicating rapidly to the whole car. The passengers rushed to the hinder part of the car, making it impossible for any one to get out by the door. Some escaped by the windows, while a great many, unable to escape were burned to a crisp.

The bell rope was not attached to the engine, consequently there was no way of stopping the train. It was running at the rate of thirty miles an hour, and ran about three miles before it could be stopped .-The car was entirely burned in ten minutes, burning like tinder. At present it is supposed that about ten persons were burned to death and the same number injured, some very seriously, by jumping off the train.

Several bodies were burned to a crisp, and it will be impossible to identify them. Later .- Among the burned remains of the victims of Saturday night's railway accident there is one face that is perfectly recognizable as that of one of the unfortunate young ladies. A locket she wore was found on her neck in good preservation. Last night eight coffins were sent to Kokoma station. Yesterday afternoon in searching among the wreck a number of gold nuggets were found, supposed to be melted jewelry; also two gold watches, which have been identified.

After seven corpses had been identified a number were still left, and it was supposed that one or two others had gone.

Who Owns this Money?

Mr. Thaddeus Durling a well-to-do farmer living in the town of Chester, Orange county, N. Y. Among the heirlooms bequeathed to Mr. Durling by his father, was an old, clumsy writing desk, which had descended from father to son for many generations. At last the desk was thrown into the corner of Mr. Durling's wood-shed. Here it was seen by a neighbor, Mr. Geo. Mapes, who took a fancy to it. On mentioning this to Mr. Durling, the desk was given to Mr. Mapes. Mr. Mapes sent the desk to Mr. Rumsey, the village cabinet maker, to have it repaired and varnished. The desk stood in the door of Mr. Rumsey's shop, where it attracted the attention of a Mr. Seeley, an Orange county farmer. After looking at it, Mr. Seeley said, "Rumsey, that looks like one of the old desks with secret drawers that you sometimes read about."

"That's a fact," replied Rumsey; "suppose we search the old thing and see what we can find."

An investigation was at once made, and soon a little narrow secret drawer was discovered. In this drawer were twenty-one American aliver dollars, the coinage running back into 1700.

Of course the news of the discovery soon flew through the village. Mr. Durling and Mr. Mapes both claimed the money from Mr. Rumsey. As he could not determine who was entitled to it, he placed the money in the bank to await the arbitration of the court before which a suit is now pending as to who is the rightful owner.

se is the universal topic of conversation the townspeople and farmers for miles around. Some contend that the money belongs to Durling; some say that he gave the desk and all it contained to Mapes, while others say that Mr. Rumsey and Mr. Seeley are the rightful owners.

A Profitable Bed Quilt.

A curious illustration of the ingenuity of smugglers in defranding the revenue recently came to light at Suspension Bridge. There was a sale of confiscated goods by the Collector at that port some time ago, and a gentleman, for the fun of the thing, made a bid for the pessession of an ordinary looking bedquilt or comforter. He got it for fifty cents and took the secondhand thing home, where its arrival elicted no great enthusiasm. After being contemptuously kicked about the house for some time, the quilt was finally assigned to a servant's bed. By and by a rent occurred in its calico integument, and the servant girl one day chanced to notice a corner of superior looking stuff emerging from the aperture. An examination was made, and some rich results followed the old quilt's dissection. Five yards of rich pink silks, nine yards of heavy black ditto, a quantity of velvet ribbon and numerous silk neckties were successively exhumed from its capacious interior, greatly to the astonishment of the owner. Since the affair transpired there has been an active demand at the Collector's sale for bedquilts, but the importation does not seem to be kept up, 137 On Saturday night Ann Toner, a young widow residing on the Heights, in Jersey City, in a fit of jealousy drew a revolver and fatally shot her affianced husbond, John Kennedy. The ball entered his brain, but was successfully extracted and the man may recover. He asserts that it was not Mrs. Toner who shot him, but a man who walked behind them. His statement is not generally believed.
