The Liquor Crusade.

An account from Dayton, Ohio, dated the 9th inst., says : "The second day of the women's assault on king alcohol is more exciting than the first.

Four detachments marched to the saloons visited on the first day. They were excluded from most of the places and were received at the doors by the saloonists with cold courtesy. The saloon keepers were especially uneasy under a decision of Judge Smith, which declares that violators of law cannot come into court for redress. The women prayed and sang, surrounded by a large crowd, all day long, at Haddick's beer saloon. In the afternoon over one thousand curious men and noisy boys encompassed them, when the women ceased praying and began singing. They were cheered and jeered, and the multitude pushed into the bar room for beer.

At Haddick's a mock prayer meeting was going on in the saloon nearly opposite which was continued, when women went over to that place when drivers of beer wagons pushed through the female detachment, shouldering kegs of beer which was drank up as fast as it could be delivered.

Haddick, Thobe, Clemsnes, Fisher and Becker Bros., seemed to be the special object of attention, and some rude scenes were reported at these places. Not one of the saloonists were visited to-day but exhibited signs of surrender.

Within three days five bars have been closed in deference to public sentiment, without the women's intervention. There were many intoxicated men on the streets and the day closed with a drunken fight, in which a policeman was badly pounded. Four or five men were arrested. The excitement is increasing bourly and apprehensions of disagreeable results are felt.

In Lincoln, Neb., the ladies invaded Major Klentsch's saloon about the time he usually closed for the night. He told them to go out, but they wouldn't go. So he turned off the gas and locked them in. The prisoners saug and prayed in the dark, until friends came and rescued them by breaking in the door. A lawsuit for trespass has been begun by Klentsch. In Madison a saloon keeper paid fifteen dollars to a father to escape prosecution for selling rum to his son, a minor; but, upon learning that the legal penalty is only five dollars, he sues to recover the excess. In California a bill is in the Legislature prohibiting the sale of liquor within one mile of any school. The dealers claim that if it becomes a law the temperance folks will start shrewdly located apologies for schools so that virtual prohibition will be the result. In a late liquor raid in Rutland, the truckman hired to cart off the seized goods made a private bargain with the owner, and took about half of them back to the store after the trouble was over. Boston enemies of temperance say that until recently Dio Lewis let a building for liquor selling, and are much elated.

A Shrewd Father. About a year ago, if I remember rightly, a story went the rounds which credited that ingenious gentleman, the Western man with having successfully carried out one of the most original of plans for getting his daughters comfortably settled in life, without any cost whatever to himself. He had a large and expensive family. Three out of four of the daughters were marriageable. They were very pretty girls, and had many admirers. The father permitted them to receive attentions from the most eligible young men, and to all outward appearances seemed perfectly content to part with his treasures until asked to do so. Each demand for consent was the signal for an outburst of feeling that ended in the sudden exit of the applicant. The lovers, however, were not to be prevented from attaining happiness by what they believed to be the whim of a selfish father. They eloped, were married and forgiven. The real state of the case was, the father could not afford to buy three suitable outfits, and pay the expenses of three feasts. Not seeing any prospect in the immediate future of being better able to do so, after ransacking his brain to find a way out of the difficulty, he at last concluded to frown on the young people, and take the chances of what might follow. The elopements didn't cost him a cent; the expense of outfits and weddings was saved; and his reputation for liberality did not suffer in the least, and his neighbors continued in ignorance of the actual condition of his exchequer.

A New Business.

Lately a trade has been developed among some Rochester shippers about which but little is known. It is the trade in dried potatoes. Potatoes are sliced up and dried in much the same manner as dried apples. One firm in that city has an order on hand now for 50,000 pounds of these dried potatoes, as well as for 1,500 bushels of onions, which are dried in much the same manner. They are intended for the navy. A bushel of potatoes dries away to about ten pounds. When ready they are put into large tin cans, holding about forty pounds each, and sealed up the same as
