Bluffing a Peddler.

A well known tin peddler traveled around to dispense notions to such as were willing to bargain. He was a persevering trader, and never would be bluffed off with a short answer. From one house particular he received continued rebuffs and assurances that nothing was wanted. They never bought anything in that line. Nevtheless, he made his calls steadily with each regular round, till he became a regular pest, and in reply to the information that it was useless to call, made known his purpose to do so as often as he pleased.

One bitter cold day the bell rang, and the good lady hastened to get her hands from the dough in which they were busy, to answer the call. When she reached the door, there stood the everlasting tin ped-

"Any tinware to-day, ma'am?"

"Have you any tin cake dishes?"
"Yes, ma'am." And away he goes to bring the samples, chuckling at the idea that his zeal was so successful at last.

"There's nothing," he muttered, "like hanging on anyhow." The tins were brought, and tin pans were next inquired for. The pans were brought and other articles enumerated, to seven different kinds, until a goodly portion of the peddler's goods had to be transferred to the house. "Is there anything else you want?" he

"Oh, no I don't want any of these; I only asked if you had them."

The peddler was fairly sold, and for a moment felt like getting angry, but the idea rather tickled him, and he commenced returning his wares to his cart, without uttering a word. He has never called at that house since.

An old darkey was once sent by his master with a covered basket to bring a small pig from a neighbor's. Having deposited it safely beneath the lid, he started for home, stopping occasionally at the groggeries that he passed to take a drink and hear the news. Two mischievous boys observed that the old man was growing intoxicated and they planned to have some sport. They procured a puppy and at the next stopping place, they secretly removed the pig and made an exchange.

On coming out the old man lifted the lid to see that all was right, and was amazed to find that in the place of his pig he had a pup. He studied a moment, and then took his new charge along, shaking his head gravely. At the next stopping place the pig was returned and the pup taken out again; and when the old man again examined the basket to see if the pup was safe, his amazement was again doubled as he recognized his pig once more. At the next stopping place another transformation took place, and the mystified darkey became at last utterly bewildered. When he reached home, he threw down the basket in disgust, exclaiming, "Dar he is! Take him quick fo' he's a pup again. 'Bout half de time he's been pig an' half de time pup all de way from de fast grocery."

The Country Man's Draft.

A country fellow entered one of the New York banks walking up to the counter, exclaimed: "Here I am. I want you to take a fair look at me. Without a word further he strode out. The next day the same customer reappeared, uttered the same words and again disappeared. The third day, at about the same time, he walked in and, advancing to the teller's desk, threw down a draft payable three days after sight. "Now," said he, "you've seen me three times. I want the money for it."

137 Some jackass says, "Cheer up, cheer up; it's a long lane that has no turn." Don't we know it? Of course it's a long lane that has no turn. How perfectly absurd to expect a fellow to "cheer up" because a long lane has no turn! We decline to cheer up for any such reason.
