

Death from Excessive Joy.

A Milwaukee paper tells the following sad story:

About four years ago a young and stalwart German, named Fritz Schonman, left his native land to seek his fortune in the new world.

Being of an industrious disposition and but little inclined to squander his earnings he soon put by a snug little sum, entirely sufficient to warrant him in entering the matrimonial market, and accordingly his friends advised him so to do, assuring him that his good looks, honest manner, and business capacity, would enable him to secure a prize from among the many red-cheeked Tauton damsels who were wont to smile on him.

When Fritz was accused of such a deed he blushingly acknowledged it, and stated that he was working and saving in order that he might bring Katrina here, marry her, purchase a house, and settle down to a happy life, and aspire to the position of Alderman of the Tenth ward.

The time that intervened between that day and yesterday (when Katrina was expected to reach Milwaukee) was principally occupied by Fritz in endeavoring to appear natural and easy, but with poor success. His anxious joy was plainly depicted in every lineament of his good-natured face.

The quick eye of love revealed the yearning hearts to each other, and with the words "Fritz!" Katrina!" the long separated lovers clasped each other in a close embrace. After the first joyous emotions were over, Fritz tried to disengage himself, to present his future bride to many friends who had come around, but the hands were firmly clasped about his neck, and would not separate.

No words can describe the grief of the man who, but a moment before, had stepped as proudly as a king, conscious of having the love of a true woman. His anguish overpowered and unmanned him, and the few deep sobs which convulsed his frame soon passed, leaving him gazing at the corpse of Katrina with a dull, agonizing wild stare.

One of the detectives in Bergen co., was looking about on Tuesday when suddenly it struck him to explore the attic of an old school house by the roadside.

Lucy Josephs was arraigned in New Orleans last week for the ill-treatment of her stepson, a boy of eleven, very small for his age. She had tortured him with devilish ingenuity, among other expedients compelling him to kneel upon hot bricks until his knees became roasted.

The wind has gone into the crusading business at Brooklyn, Jackson county, Mich. Lately it took down an undertaker's sign from its fastenings, and deposited it in front of a whisky shop, informing passers-by that "Caskets" and coffins were furnished at short notice.

The Mississippi Legislature has passed an act requiring liquor dealers to obtain the written consent of a majority of the men and women who are of age in the town where they propose to sell before license can be granted.
