WALL PAPERS, SPRING PRETTY STYLES PATTERNS

Have just been received by F. MORTIMER

Didn't Know Him. Had you been in Washington a few weeks ago you might have had a hearty laugh at the expense of Captain Codman.

In the last hours of the late Congress the captain came tumbling down stairs in hot search of some one to carry from the committee-room of Commerce a patent fog-horn intrusted to his care by an ingenious Yankee acquaintance.

At the foot of the stairway he encountered a colored man sauntering along, pulling away at a huge cigar. "My good fellow," cried the captain, "I'll give you a dollar to carry down my fog-horn?"

"Who de debbil do you take me fuh?" responded Africa, drawing himself up in dignified wrath.

"An able-bodied man willing to make a dollar," responded Codman. "Den you don't know me, sah."

"No, sir, and I have no time to seek an introduction. Who are you anyhow?" "Me, sah? I se de honouable Mr. Cain, member ob Congress."

"You don't say so," remarked the captain, thoughtfully. "Well, Mr. Cain, I am sorry, for you have probably lost the only opportunity you will ever have of making an honest dollar."

An enthusiastic English sportsman one day was exploring the banks of his favorite stream, accompanied by the landlord of the inn, at which he was stopping. The latter happened to come too close just at the moment when his guest was throwing his fly, the hook caught in the poor wretch's eyelid, causing him intense pain.

The sportsman coolly took out the hook, re-adjusted the fly, and, as the inn-keeper continued howling at the top of his voice, "You can," said he, in a whisper, "put your eye down in your bill; but I'll trouble you to stop that noise so as not to frighten my fish."

A very vain preacher, having delivered a sermon in the hearing of the Rev. Robert Hall, pressed him, with a mixture of self-complacency and indelicacy, to state what he thought of the sermon. Mr. Hall remained silent for some time, hoping that this silence would be rightly interpreted, but this only caused the question to be pressed with greater earnestness. At length Mr. Hall admitted "There was one very fine passage." "I am rejoiced to hear you say so. Pray, sir, which was it?" "Why, sir, it was the passage from the pulpit to the vestry."

Winchell tells a story of a stranger meeting an Emerald leaning against a post, watching a funeral procession coming out of a house, when the following dialogue ensued:

"Is that a funeral?" "Yes, sir, I'm thinking it is." "Anybody of distinction?" "I reckon it is, sir."

"Who is it that died?" "Why, the gentleman in the coffin, to be sure," replied Pat with a knowing look.

A bridegroom seldom renders his mother-in-law speechless, but here is an interesting case; A self-possessed young man called at a house in Atlanta, Ga., a few mornings ago and asked to see his wife. "She is not here," replied the mistress of the house. "There is no one here but the members of my own family." "Well," he replied, "It's one of them I want to see. I married your eldest daughter last night."

A Minnesota man has written a letter protesting strongly against the "outrageous indecency" of oarsmen wearing sleeveless shirts while practicing in front of St. Paul. We have often thought of this thing, and wept over it. A lady has a right to wear a sleeveless shirt, of course; but there, there! this is dangerous.

A youth who attended a Scotch revival meeting for the fun of the thing ironically inquired of the minister "whether he could work a miracle or not." The man's curiosity was fully satisfied by the minister's kicking him out of the church, with the valedictory, "We cannot work miracles, but we can cast out devils!"

The head of the family is about to eat an apple. Mother—"Say, father, give us a piece." Daughter—"O, father, give me a piece." Son—"O, father, I want a piece." Niece—"Wont you please give me a piece, too?" Father (disgusted)—"Here, the rest of you take the apple and give me a piece."

Servant (returned from an errand)—"Please, m'm I couldn't get it." Mistress—"Get what?" Servant—"They said they didn't keep it m'm." Mistress—"Keep what?" Servant—"What you told me to fetch, m'm." Mistress—"What was that?" Servant—"dunno, m'm; I forgot."

Darwin acknowledged himself sold when his little niece asked him, seriously, what a cat has that no other animal has. He gave it up, after mature deliberation, and the sly little puss answered: "Kittens."
