How He got Out.

"John" says: I met a man in California who would tell me a story. He said: "I knew a fellow in the State once, old Bill Smith; he was the worst old beat you ever saw. He'd chase a mosquito eight miles with a pair of lemon squeezers if he thought he could get one cent for the oil. He got married on tick, and has slept on tick ever since. He was so mean that once when he had a cent in his pocket, to keep his wife from getting it he compelled his oldest boy to swallow it, and that boy was a copperhead all through the war.— Bill was going down the Mississippi on a steam-boat. When the collection was being taken up, he got on the guard to hide, and fell overboard. The water was a hundred feet deep and two miles wide, and the best water to drown a man in I ever saw.— Bill couldn't swim a stroke, but, stranger he got out.

Says I, "How?" Says he, "He just took and walked right ashore."

Says I, "How could he walk ashore in water one hundred feet deep?" Says he, "Stranger, do you want to know very bad?"

Says I, "Yes, I do, real bad." Says he, "Well, stranger, that Bill Smith was such a big sponge he just soaked all the water up, and then walked right ashore."

His Point.

A lovely manner of avoiding sea-sickness has lately been put in practice by an English traveler. He was on board a steamer crossing the British channel between Dover and Calais. On deck, right opposite our Briton, was seated a beautiful French actress, who was going to London, where she had an engagement for a theater. The Englishman was keeping his eyes riveted on the face of the lady, whose patience being exhausted said to the islander, "Why are you looking so persistently at me?" The gentleman answered with an exquisite politeness, "Madam, it is said to avoid sea-sickness, one must rest his eyes upon a single point, and not stop a moment to look at the sea. You are the point which I have chosen."

An Irishman's Question.

A preacher of the brawling description was enlarging upon the beauties of an unsullied conscience and a pure heart, before a congregation, of whom some were Irishmen. "Let your actions be so pure," said he, "your conscience so clean, that if you had a window in your bosom, your neighbors could see not an impure act or even thought within your breast, my hearers. Think, O my hearers, feel as though there were a window in your bosoms—in your very bosoms." "Mister Guinness," asked one of the congregation, half rising from his seat, "Mister Guinness, wouldn't a pane in the stomach answer the same purpose?"

"On one occasion Mr. Jones had attired himself hastily, and in the hurry had put on a shirt stamped on the back in full sight with the name of his roommate—J. Owens. "Hello!" said a friend, "you've borrowed a biled shirt for your holiday." "O no," said Jones, "this is my shirt." "Well, there's another man's name on it," pointing to the convincing proof, "J. Owens." But, as quick as a flash, when Jones saw his mistake he turned it to his advantage: "O, that is the way our Welsh folks spell the family name, J-o-w-e-n-s, Jowens, or Jones, as you call it! D'ye see?"

This anecdote is as good as it is old: A college professor encouraged his geology class to collect specimens; and one day they deposited a piece of brick, streaked and stained, with their collection, thinking to impose upon the doctor. Taking up the specimens, the professor remarked, "This is a piece of baryta from the Cheshire mines." Holding up another: "This is a piece of folespar from the Portland quarries. And this," coming to the brick, "is a piece of impudence from some member of the class."

What strange creatures girls are.— Offer one of them good wages to work for you, and ten chances to one if the old woman can't spare any of her girls; but just propose matrimony, and see if they don't jump at the chance of working a lifetime for their victuals and clothes.

Upon a man whose body was found in a river, a coroner's jury in Ireland returned the verdict, that the individual came to his death by a blow on the head, "which was given either before or after drowning."

A jurymen remarked, "May it please your honor, I am deaf in one ear." "Then leave the box," replied the Judge, "a juror must hear both sides."
