An Indiana clergyman sued a newspaper for libel and dropped dead within a week. The Detroit Free Press says these fellows will learn something by and by.

A ferryman was asked by a timid lady whether any persons were ever lost in the river over which he rowed. "Oh! no," said he, "We always find 'em the next day."

An industrious citizen of La Porte, un able to do all his work in the day-time, planted his potatoes in the evening by moonlight; what surprised his wife next morning was—what has become of those dough-nuts?

At a public gathering lately in New York, one of the gentlemen present was called upon for a speech, and this is how he responded: "Gentleman and women, I ain't no speaker. More'n twenty years back I came here a poor idiot boy, and what are I?"

Now, then, Joseph, parse courting," said the teacher to a rather slow boy.— "courting" is an irregular active transitive verb, indicative mood, present tense, third person, and singular number, and so on," said Joseph. Well, but what does it agree with?" demanded the teacher. "It agrees with all the gals in town!" triumphantly exclaimed Joseph.

A traveller in Vermont, stopping at a hotel recently, ordered supper. The meal was a very inferior one, and at its conclusion, which was soon reached, he stepped up to settle for it.

"Well," said Boniface, with alacrity, "I hope you had a good supper."

"Yes," replied he, musingly, "the supper averaged first rate; the butter was strong and the tea was weak."

It was in a village that an old scissors-grinder, calling on a minister, made the usual query, "Any scissors to grind?" Receiving a negative answer, it was the minister's turn, which he took by asking, "Are you a man of God?" "I do not understand you. "Are you prepared to die?" The question struck home. Gathering up his kit and scrambling for the door, he exclaimed, terror-stricken: "O Lor! you ain't a going to kill me, are you?"

A man who was taking the registry of births in a neighboring city, went to the house of a somewhat coarse, hard, man and not finding any one at home, asked a young lady, who was just coming out of a neighboring house, if there had been any births in that house the past year? "No," she replied immediately, "but the man who lives there ought to be born again." The registry man went on his way shaking his sides with laughter at the hit.

Two Irishmen, lately landed, were boarding at a hotel where they were muchly troubled with mosquitos and could hardly obtain sleep enough to satisfy nature.

"Put your head under the blankets," said Mike, "an' they'll not bite ye."

Pat did as requested, but scarcely had he found himself free from the mosquitos when he was attacked by bed-bugs that he had failed to notice.

"Bad luck to me Mike," said he; "here's another kind widout wings an' fiddles, but begorra they bite as hard as the others."

Many years ago, Elder Place, then preaching in Johnstown, was called to attend the funeral of an aged female parishioner. At the close of the service the surviving partner stepped forward to take one last look, and in a tone of regretful resignation, gave utterance to the following remark: "Well, Betsey, you've been a good wife to me, and I'm sorry to lose you; but I've no doubt you're now sleeping sweetly in Beelzebub's bosom."

"No! no! brother," hastily interposed the astonished minister; "you don't mean that. You mean she is now sleeping in Abraham's bosom."

"Well, Elder," rejoined the sorrowing man, "I don't know as it makes much difference whether it is Beelzebub or Abraham. I expect they are both very good men, for we read their names in the Bible."

About two o'clock on a December night, in Illinois, when the thermometer stood in the neighborhood of zero, a party of wags hailed a farm-house in a very boisterous manner. The farmer sprang out of his bed, drew on a few articles of clothing, and ran out to see what was wanted, when the following interesting dialogue ensued:

"Have you any hay, Mr.—?" "Plenty of it sir."

"Have you plenty of corn?" "Yes."

"Any oats?" "Yes."

"Plenty of meats and breadstuffs?" "Yes!" "We are glad to hear it, for they are useful things in a family." The party then drove off, leaving the farmer to his reflections.
