"Help" in Virginia.

Don Platt, writing about the Virginia mountaineers, says: They have the same sense of social equality that afflicts the native born laboring classes of the West; and although poverty lies in the mountains, making it difficult to exist with comfort, it is impossible to get house servants from among the natives for love or money. A charming little lady here, Mrs. Morgan, sister-in-law to the late famous John Morgan, gave us a very amusing account of her trials in this direction. Her first experience was the tall, angular mountain maid. One morning she announced a visitor to Mrs. Morgan.

"Who is he, Malvina?"

"Lord only knows, I don't; he's a total stranger to me."

"Is he a gentleman?"

"Well, he ain't a niggab."

"Did he not give you his name?"

"Not much. But I didn't ask him."

"But he gave his card?"

"You mean that bit of wappah with printin' on it?"

"Of course; what did you do with it?"

"Why, I just put it whar I seed the others, on the pallow table."

"How vexatious! And what did you say to him?"

"I told him to hitch on to the door knob till I seed you."

The Landlord's Gun.

Dan. Davis says Promontory, out on the "C. P." road, is a nice place. Dan. was out there once, and he says he was charmed with the manners and customs—almost patriarchal in their frank simplicity—of the people. The first day he was in the place Dan. stopped at the principal hotel of the town. It was a nice place, and the landlord was a very agreeable and friendly sort of a man.

Says Dan.: "When dinner was ready the landlord came out into the street in front of the hotel with a double-barrelled shot-gun. Raising the gun above his head he fired off one barrel."

I said to him, "What did you do that for?"

Said he "to call my boarders to dinner?"

I said, "Why don't you fire off both barrels?"

"Oh," said he, "I keep the other to collect with."

The cash was a little short with Dan., and he went and hunted up another boarding-house.

A Darkey in a Fix.

A colored man in Baltimore, while under the influence of liquor a few days since, climbed upon his roof, and amused himself by jumping thence to the roof of the adjoining house, and thence to the next, till his antics had attracted quite a crowd of persons in the street below. Seized with a sudden idea that the spectators were going to shoot him, he sought refuge in a chimney, and slid down to within a few feet of the first floor, where he became wedged in beyond the power of extrication. At about the same moment the inhabitants of that story, unaware that the draught was choked by a human body, lighted a fire.—The unearthly noise which proceeded from the chimney was attributed to some agency similar to that which recently caused the mysterious bell ringing in the same city; and it was not till two police officers entered the room and made an attack upon the fire-place that the scorched inebriate was rescued from his perilous position.

An American youth, while traveling in California, was ambitiously displaying a small pistol before a brawny miner, whose belt was weighing down with two heavy six shooters, when the miner asked what he had there.

"Why," replied the youth, "that is a pistol."

"Well," said the rough, "if you should shoot me with that, and I should find it out, I'd lick you like fun."

A lady who wished to have her husband's life insured in a Boston office the other day, gave as a reason that she either wanted a husband or some money, she "didn't care which." She never expected both at the same time.

"I can speak seven different languages," said a convict, as he entered a penitentiary.

"No matter," said the keeper, "we have only one language here, and very little of that."

A Jersey City lawyer was making a high-flown speech the other day, about angels' tears, weeping willows and tombstones, when his Honor said: "Confine your remarks to the dog fight."

A man who will go to the cemetery with his wife on Sunday, and weep over her first husband's grave and walk home without a cross word shall have our vote every time he comes up for office.
